Announcing the Upcoming Show Tours Lineup...

Mary Poppins Wed., Dec. 6th - $175 pp. Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious! Based on the books by P.L. Travers and the classic Walt Disney film, this is the story of the Banks family and how their lives change after the arrival of nanny Mary Poppins at their home. Includes front mezzanine ticket, lunch at the U.N. Delegate's Dining Room and deluxe round-trip transportation. Also available on Jan. 24th, includes orchestra ticket and lunch at a fine NYC restaurant to be determined. SF

The New York Philharmonic Presents Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra. Wynton Marsalis, Music Director; Bramwell Tovey, Conductor Sat., Dec. 9th - $165 pp. Program to include compositions by Copland, Christopher Rouse and Tchaikovsky/Ellington (Nutcracker selections). Package includes orchestra concert ticket, dinner at Lincoln Center's Panevino restaurant and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

A Norman Rockwell Christmas Sat., Dec. 9th - Mon., Dec. 11th (three day tour) - $389 pp./double occ. The Berkshire Mountains are the perfect backdrop for this holiday excursion. See hundreds of decorated trees set in The Berkshire Museum, holiday decorated "cottages" from the "Gilded Age" and 500,000 twinkling lights in a 2-1/2 mile drive. Package includes 2 nights hotel accommodations, 1 lunch at the famous Red Lion Inn, 2 dinners, tours, museum admissions, round-trip transportation and more. SF

Les Miserables Wed., Jan. 3rd - $165 pp. Returning to Broadway for a 6-month engagement to celebrate becoming the world's longest-running musical, this legendary show based on Victor Hugo's epic novel tells the story of relentless policeman Javert's pursuit of escaped convict Jean Valjean over decades through the tumult of revolutionary France. Includes orchestra show ticket, lunch at Tavern on the Green and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Atlantic City Sun., Jan. 7th - Mon., Jan. 8th (overnight trip) - $130 pp./double occ. May lady luck be with you! Join us for an overnight to the Tropicana Casino & Resort. Package includes $10 in coins, dinner voucher, show (if available) and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

"1964" THE TRIBUTE AT CARNEGIE HALL - World famous Re-creation of a Live Beatles Concert Sat., Jan. 27th - $165 pp. If you are too young to have seen the Beatles in concert for yourself or if you just want to do it again, here's the chance you've been waiting for. For over 20 years, this group of performers has successfully re-created every sensation of being at a Beatles concert circa 1966. Includes orchestra ticket (8 pm performance), dinner at a fine NYC restaurant and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Grey Gardens Wed., Jan. 31st - $170 pp. This show brings to life both the delightfully eccentric aunt and the cousin of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Once among the brightest names in the pre-Camelot social register, these two women became East Hampton's most notorious recluses, living in a dilapidated 28-room mansion. Includes orchestra show ticket, lunch at a fine NYC restaurant and deluxe round-trip transportation. Also available Mar. 7th. SF

Mamma Mia! Wed., Feb. 14th (Matinee performance) - $160 pp. Mamma Mia collects a group of hit songs by the Swedish supergroup ABBA and shapes them around the story of a single mother coping with her young daughter's marriage on a picturesque Greek isle. Includes orchestra show ticket, lunch at Tavern on the Green and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

The Phantom of the Opera Wed., Feb. 14th (Evening performance) - $185 pp. Now the longest-running show in Broadway history, Andrew Lloyd Webber's The Phantom of the Opera tells the story of a disfigured musical genius who haunts the catacombs beneath the Paris Opera and exerts strange control over a lovely young soprano. Includes orchestra show ticket, dinner at La Petite Auberge and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Philadelphia Flower Show - "Legends of Ireland" Sun., Mar. 4th - $75 pp. The "Legends of Ireland" theme conjures up images of fairies, shamrocks, leprechauns and lots of green. This promises to be a terrific, colorful show. Package includes admission to the flower show and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Guitarist Yosi Piamenta is a truly unique musician, and is a beloved fixture in the New York City music scene. Yosi's performances masterfully deliver a frenetic fusion of Middle Eastern scales, blues, rock, jazz, and soulful blues. While some have compared Piamenta's fret magic to the likes of Jimi Hendrix, Jerry Garcia, and Carlos Santana, Yosi's style is truly his own. An experience you won't forget!

The "Cottage" Contest

Early Dan's Papers Competition Created the Estate Section

By Dan Rattiner

In a nostalgic mood the other day, I went down into the temperature controlled basement archives of Dan's Papers and began flipping through the back issues from the early days. I wasn't looking for anything in particular. I just wanted to remind myself of how everything was way back then, when the paper was new and the world was young and cheery.

And so it was that I came upon one of the first events ever held by Dan's Papers. You think that our little Film Festival, now in its 12th year, our Potatohampton race, now in its 29th year and our Kite Fly, now in its 35th year go back for a bit? Well, in 1890, when Dan's Papers was in its infancy, our publisher at the time, Dan Smithers-Rattiner, organized what we believe was a very important contest for this community. He called it the Dan's Papers Mansion Building Contest, and he offered up a gold trophy for the winner.

In the years prior, throughout the 1870s and 1880s, the railroad made it possible for the well-to-do citizens of Manhattan to come east for the summer for the "air" and "waters," which were thought to have healing properties. The trip on the railroad took only three hours to Southampton, and the coaches and parlor cars were comfortable and pleasant. Black men in white coats, which the railroad called Porters, served people on these trains. And upon arrival in Southampton, these people — the summer people, it would be fair to call them — would be met by servants and footmen who took care of the cottages when they were not there. These "cottages" really were cottages back then. They were small places, with maybe three bedrooms. The servants generally slept the cup, which he held aloft for everyone to see.

More than a hundred men got busy hiring architects and having plans drawn up. The few people in the real estate business out in the Hamptons were delighted to handle the surge in business. The price of an 8-acre oceanfront parcel, it is said, went from $50 to $65 during just those six months when the buying frenzy overtook the wealthy denizens of the Manhattan borough.

Pretty soon, the construction of these homes was underway. King Herzog of Poland was the early leader, breaking ground on a palatial 22-bedroom palace in the Second Empire Baroque Style in Water Mill that he was able to occupy well before the September deadline. He and his family spent the first weekend in Water Mill in April.

The Woolworth-Lutz family finished a 24-bedroom mansion in the Egyptian Revival Style in Shinnecock Hills in late April to take the lead. But they were soon overtaken by the Brandenbergs of Bavaria, who finished a 31-room "cottage" in the Federalist style in East Hampton in early May.

All together, 92 families broke ground to compete in the contest, and so there were the foundations and walls going up on 92 ocean-in converted haylofts over the horse stables where the horses and carriages were kept.

But in the fall of 1889, Dan Smithers-Rattiner decided to have a contest. He announced it at the Plaza Hotel in Manhattan at a fundraiser for the Temperance League. The Manhattan family able to build, complete and occupy the largest summer home in the Hamptons before Labor Day of 1890 would win

BREAKING NEWS

LI Pilots Tried to Contact Brazilian Air Traffic Control

The two American pilots, Joseph Lepore from Bay Shore and Jan Paladino from Westhampton Beach, held in Brazil following an airplane crash there, have again had their request for their passports back denied even though there is now evidence that they did everything they could to try to contact Brazilian Air Traffic Control prior to the crash.

Tapes released on November 19th show that the pilots tried to confirm their assigned altitude with Air Traffic Controllers nineteen times and received no response. The tapes recorded the pilots trying to reach Controllers 62 minutes before the crash, their last call falling on deaf ears only one minute prior to the crash, the worst in Brazil's history. Attorneys on both sides say that the investigation could take months to conclude, and that the pilots could face charges of manslaughter if they are convicted of any wrongdoing that may have led to the Boeing 737's fatal crash, which killed all 154 people on board. The other plane, piloted by Lepore and Paladino, suffered damage but landed safely.

front dwellings in Mecox, Southampton, Bridgehampton, East Hampton, Westhampton Beach, Quogue, Quogue and Amagansett.

As the contest moved into high gear over the holiday months of 1889-1890, it became apparent that the availability of artisans, plumbing people, contractors and roofers was about exhausted in the Hamptons community, and so trainloads of people from the building trades had to be brought in from the city aboard what was then called the "trade parade train." These were raucous affairs, with bar cars and standing room and few amenities, and they rattled out here from Penn Station beginning at 5 in the morning, returning home from a day's work in the Hamptons at 10 at night.

Through the winter, the homes continued to spring up. The oil baron Sir Harold McMasters built a home of 37 bedrooms in the Gothic Revival style that he was able to occupy just before Memorial Day, and the department store mogul Colonel "Wild Bill" Gimbel built a 46-bedroom affair in Shinnecock Hills in the classic High Victorian style that he was able to complete in June.

In the end, the cup was won by Ambassador Frederick McNight-Hodgekiss, who built an exact replica of the State House in Virginia in the Georgian Style, only double-size, and with two cupolas on the roof, a wrap-around porch and a marvel of science at the time, an elevator. The house was four stories high, and had 51 bedrooms. He and his family occupied the house in the middle of August for the first time, beating the deadline by 19 days.

But if Ambassador McNight-Hodgekiss won this contest, he did so only after a very controversial decision involving the home of Senator Aloysius Claghorn, who had a plantation in North Carolina and who believed when he started the construction he would win easily, which he would have if only he had not inaccurately noted the New York decision about when Labor Day was.

The Claghorn Mansion, known as Seaside Manor, was located on Gin Lane in Southampton, and had a record 60 bedrooms. Built in the Academic Classicism Beaux-Arts style, it featured a domed living room, which featured not one, but two observatories in the roof from which to view the heavens, each of which could cunningly be caused to raise up from the slate of the roof with the turning of a crank.

Unfortunately for Colonel Claghorn, the North Carolina Legislature's understanding of Labor Day in that state was that it was a few days after the Labor Day celebration in the rest of the country. North Carolina had followed New York's lead in doing this. There had been a debate in the North Carolina Legislature which Colonel Claghorn, who served as Senator from the Charlotte District, had ironically participated in just two years before. The rest of the country would be allowed to have their Labor Day on the first Monday after the first of September. North Carolina would, to allow for the completion of the cotton harvest, have its Labor Day the following week on Monday. North Carolina and New York, with its potato harvest, would therefore be the only two states to observe Labor Day a week later.

Thus it was, although Colonel Claghorn's home was the larger, he and his family showed up six days after the contest ended. New York had NOT changed the observance of Labor Day to be a week later. And so, the Claghorn entry was eliminated from consideration due to this error.

The award of the gold cup was made by Mr. Dan Smithers-Rattiner in the first floor living room of the Shinnecock Hills Golf Links clubhouse, which was newly completed for Colonel William Vanderbilt just for that occasion.

Winslow's Secret

The Pilgrim Who Wouldn't Know a Turkey if he Tripped on It

By Dan Rattiner

Some holiday traditions are very, very puzzling. Bunnies at Easter? Santa coming down chimneys? Goblins at Halloween? Turkey at Thanksgiving, however, is not one of them. It does, however, have its own interesting story.

As it turns out, there is no direct evidence that turkey was served at that first Thanksgiving feast in Plymouth, Massachusetts in 1621. There were no pictures taken, no video. Not even drawings of it at the time showing turkey on the menu. But there is an entry in the diary of a man who attended this event by the name of Edward Winslow about it. And though he does not mention turkeys by name, many think turkey was served and he just didn't know a turkey when he saw one. By the way, Winslow's diary entry is the only direct reference to that first sit-down Thanksgiving between the Pilgrims and Indians from anybody who attended it.

Winslow made entries in his diary on a very sporadic basis. He called it "Journal of the Pilgrims at Plymouth," and when he sat down to write in it, which might have been once a month or once every couple of months, he would gather together various letters and other documents from that time interval and line them up chronologically to put them in the book. The entry about Thanksgiving comes in a letter that he wrote on December 11, 1621, which was two months after the event. (And you thought it was the last Thursday in November.) He rewrote the letter into the diary sometime after that, along with some other items, perhaps as far forward as January.

He doesn't mention turkey, but he does men-men bagged three geese and six ducks. He goes on year after year describing these new and exotic creatures he sees.

There is also little doubt that Winslow heard about the turkey. People talked about them and they were running wild all over the place. (They were also in what was to become the rest of the United States, Mexico and Latin America.) William Bradford, who was the governor of the colony, wrote a book about his time in that capacity and often mentioned, in various contexts, wild turkeys. He also mentioned various feasts with the Indians, but does not refer to any first feast. He also wrote his book two years after the first feast would have taken place. So he may not even have remembered what they ate.

How could Edward Winslow not know a turkey when he saw one? The evidence for this is found in an entry in Winslow's diary in February of 1622, four months after the first Thanksgiving. He writes that he and some men were out hunting and they bagged a goose and a crane, both of which were "quite fat."

There are no cranes in Massachusetts in February, fat or otherwise. They have all flown south for the winter. And of course, anybody

Winslow's "fat crane" was a turkey. All winter long, he had been looking at turkeys and as far as he was concerned, he hadn't yet seen one.

tion other things they ate, including deer and fowl. Turkey is a fowl. Why not say it was turkey? He doesn't.

Indeed, reading through the diary, it is clear that Winslow was a determined observer of all sorts of animals and birds. A year earlier, on November 16, 1620, he writes how he saw six partridges, some geese and some ducks. In another entry, he describes how he and his

who has seen a crane will tell you they do not come "fat."

Winslow's "fat crane" was a turkey. All winter long, he had been looking at turkeys, and as far as he was concerned, he hadn't yet seen one. People talked about them. Perhaps he'd see one very soon.

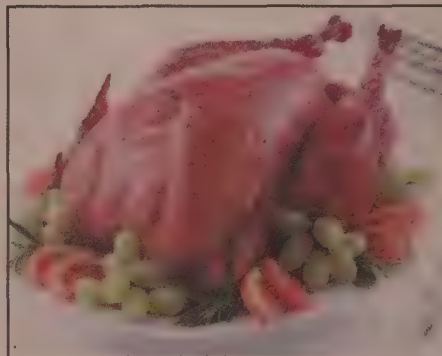

This is still not proof that there was turkey at that first Thanksgiving. But it is pretty nearly a proof that if there were turkey at the Thanksgiving table — and he did say that fowl was served — he would have called it by another name.

Which leads you to wonder, what was the matter with this guy?

And here's that story. The Americas were discovered in 1492 when Columbus landed in what is now the Dominican Republic. The Spanish came to Central America in the 1500s. And various English explorers created settlements in what is now North America in the early 1600s.

The Spaniard Cortez is credited with bringing live turkeys from Central America to Europe in 1521. Writing Henry VIII in the early 1600s Shakespeare mentions turkeys. To him, as to many other Europeans, they are very exotic birds. They are among the new big birds — cranes, guinea hens, peacocks — that the Spaniards bought back from somewhere. Where was it?

That, by the way, explains how this particular bird got to be named the turkey. Until this time, exotic foods and spices served in England had only come from the Orient, or from the Ottoman Turkish Empire. Now there were new birds from somewhere else. They were all given names. But somehow, in the confusion, this American bird got to be called a turkey. Which made it even more confusing to some. Edward Winslow was one of them. Governor William Bradford was not.

Happy turkey day.

The tiniest house. Another Dan's Papers contest in 1933.

Colonel Claghorn was invited to receive a silver tray that the newspaper had made up at the last minute for a second prize, but he declined to attend.

The Great Dan's Papers Mansion Building Contest of 1890 thus gave a running, jump start to the creation of the Hamptons as a major summer destination for the wealthy of this country, and it also propelled Dan's Papers into the front line of newspapers around the country, where it remains today. With 92 of the 94 mansions built — the other two were stopped in mid-construction because their owners experienced business reversals in 1890 — the summer colony out here was established in a single shot.

Over the years, many of these mansions were lost. Twelve of them ultimately burned to the ground, although no lives were ever lost. In 1931, after the great Crash of 1929 led to the sudden impoverishment of this nation, others were abandoned or allowed to fall into ruin, or even dynamited.

Brunch on Further Lane, Thanksgiving on the Reservation

By Dan Rattiner

Late Saturday morning on November 11, we went to a brunch at the oceanfront home of Adelaide de Menil and Ted Carpenter on Further Lane. In 1973, Ted and Adelaide bought what had been a 38-acre farm on the ocean here. It was their intention to build a serene retreat for themselves and their family and friends, and they did. The farm was seeded and landscaped. Lawns appeared and shrubs and trees grew. But instead of hiring an architect to build them a grand home on the ocean, they decided to find old historic barns, stables, sheds and homes from elsewhere in the East Hampton community and bring them to the site, to create what basically would be an old European farm estate, such as you might find in the south of France.

During a three-year period, they purchased and had towed to the site a total of twelve buildings that ranged from between two hundred and three hundred and fifty years old. The least modest of them, no more than 2,500 square feet in total, was placed closest to the ocean, in back of the double dune, nearly a quarter mile from the surf to become their main house. A breezeway led to a barn, a magnificent open space two stories tall with a beamed ceiling. This space, perhaps another 600 square feet, would become their living room. And this is where this brunch took place.

De Menil-Carpenter House Sidebar:

By Sabrina C. Mashburn

In 1973, Schlumberger heiress and photographer Adelaide de Menil and her husband, anthropologist and author Edmund Carpenter, purchased 40 acres of beachfront property on Amagansett's Further Lane. While their original plan for the property involved erecting an exact replica of de Menil's parents' Philip Johnson-designed 1950s Modernist house that is in Houston, the home they finally did construct was something else entirely. Over the years, Adelaide and her husband salvaged eight of the East End's fragile 18th and 19th-Century structures, and brought them to their property and grafted them together or placed them in context with one another in such a way as to construct an estate, complete with a guest cottage, caretaker's cottage, pool house, entryway and main house.

Now the couple will reverse the process and these historic buildings will return to the community. Six of them will be incorporated into a new design for East Hampton Town Hall, planned by Robert A.M. Stern architects, and two more will be used to enhance already-established historical sights in the town. Below is a list of the properties being donated, where they were originally built or found, and where they are going.

On a rainy Thursday evening, November 16, just five days later, we went to a community dinner held at the Shinnecock Nation Meeting Hall on the waterfront Indian reservation in Southampton.

The reservation, a property of 750 acres, has belonged to the Indians for what undoubtedly is tens of thousands of years, although nobody really knows because, until the seventeenth century, no written records were kept. At one time, it is believed that the Shinnecoeks owned much of the East End. In fact, at the present time, they are in court trying to get back about 11,000 acres of Southampton Township, which they say were taken from them by the English settlers in fraudulent transactions.

There are about 100 structures on these 750 acres, almost all of which were built within the last eighty years. Many of the earlier buildings were not built to standard building codes, because they didn't have to be. This is the property of the Shinnecock Indian Nation, a separate entity from the United States, and the Nation has few building codes. (Buildings today are constructed to code because it is the right thing to do.) Structures include this meeting hall, several smoke shops, several food and beverage stores, a Shinnecock Nation museum, a Presbyterian Church, a sports field and grandstands, an Indian ceremony platform, about 90 private homes and this meeting hall. There is also, across the street from the meeting hall, a medical clinic, recently built, and something everyone is very proud of.

The dinner at the Shinnecock Meeting Hall was held at 7 p.m. In the darkness of a November night, one enters the reservation by passing a sign that reads you are now on private property belonging to the Shinnecock Nation and you should Keep Out unless invited. The winding roads are paved, but there are no curbs or sidewalks or, in many areas, overhead street lights. Most are lined with heavy foliage. In the dark, you drive slowly, in case there are people out for a stroll at that hour. It is a rainy night, but it is warm. Sixty degrees.

Most of the homes along Further Lane in East Hampton where the de Menil-Carpenters live are gated, with an adjacent speaker and microphone system on the street side so you can state your business and ask to enter. If approved, the gates swing open by remote control, slowly, from wherever the occupants press the button.

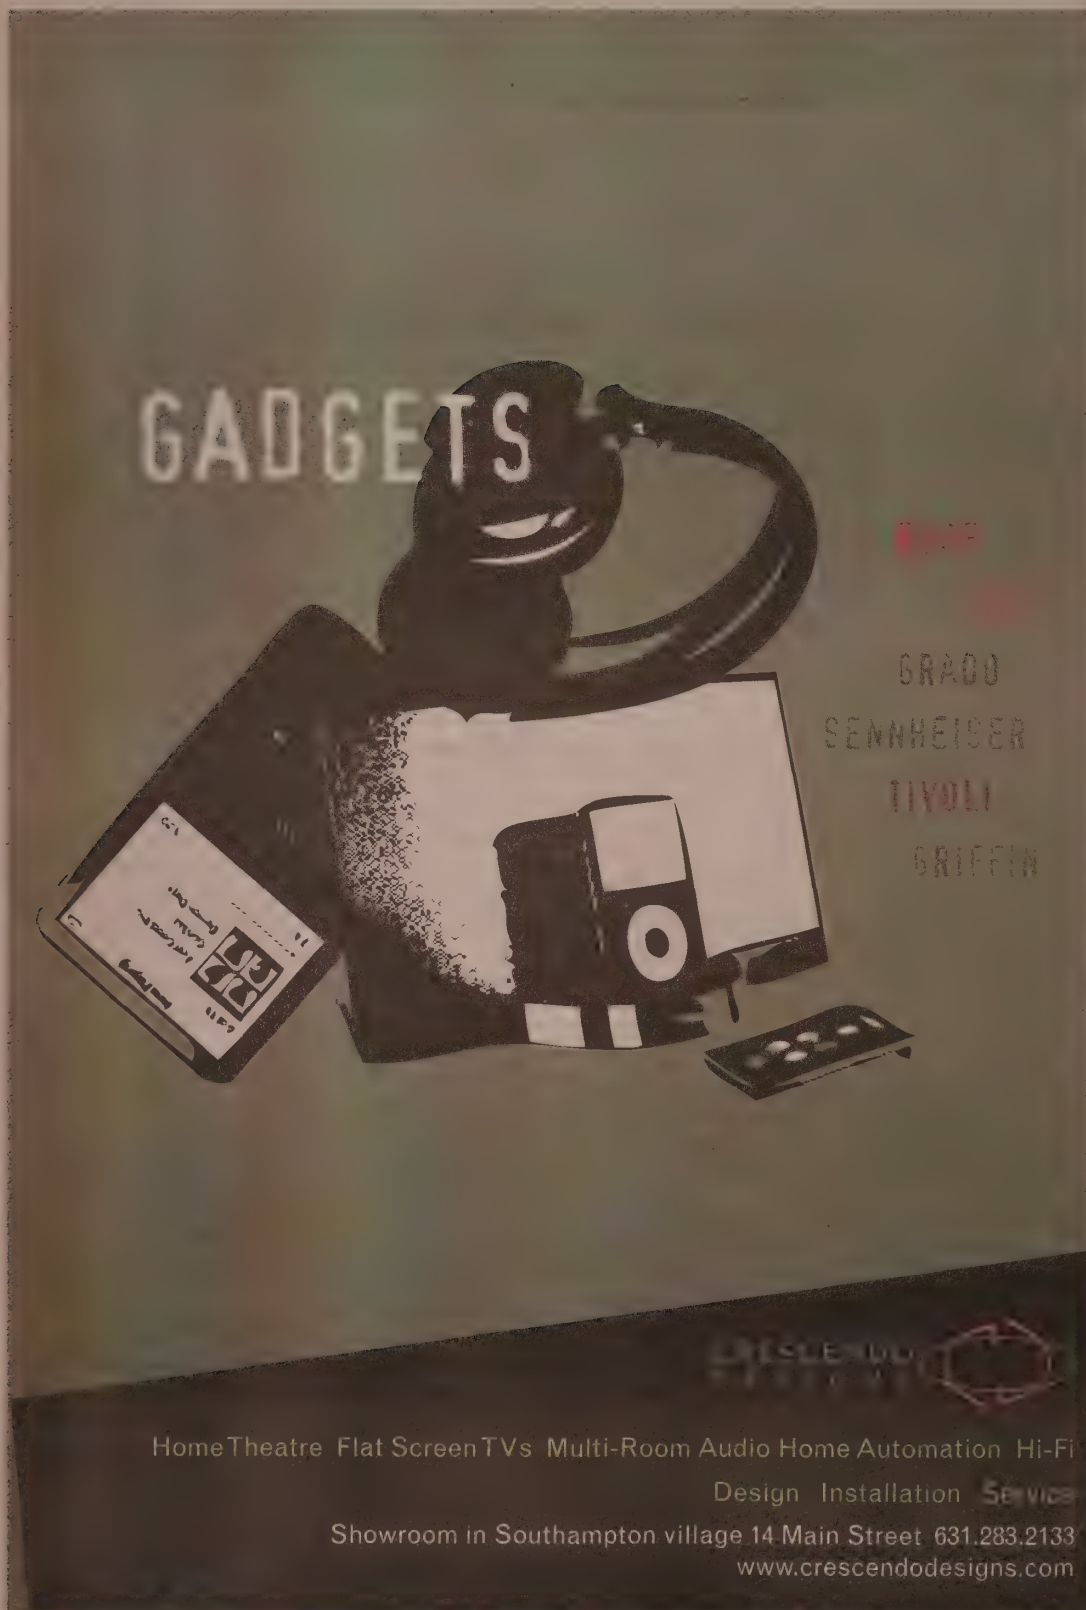

The de Menil home, however, has no gate. There is simply a small sign at the driveway entrance by the side of the road with the street number alongside it. A cobbled road, made of Belgian bricks, leads you in and past two of the twelve old shingled structures, a small cottage and a stable that you can either go around or right through — large barn doors are open at front and back — so, ingeniously, the stable forms an arch. Then you proceed down a long graveled driveway, past a cluster of shingled structures that seem to primarily be a stable, tack house, riding ring and shed and you come to the main house.

The purpose of the brunch at the de Menil estate is to showcase the re-issuing of Peter Matthiessen's book Men's Lives. Matheissen, who lives in Sagaponack, is best known for his award winning and best selling book The Snow Leopard, about his search through the mountains of Southern Asia for a sighting of this elusive and endangered creature. But Matthiessen also has written a book about his experiences with the baymen and fishermen of East Hampton who call themselves Bonackers. Descended from blue collar workers in seventeenth century England, this clan of about 500 people came to East Hampton when the first settlers landed in 1639. They lived and worked in these parts, clamming and haul seining and fishing in small boats, to provide food for the table. Matthiessen, a member of the wealthy blueblood clan that built large summer cottages here in the early twentieth century, befriended many of these Bonackers, went on fishing trips with them and wrote a book about them which first appeared in 1988. Matthiessen attended the celebration of the reprinting of his book, of course, and graciously signed many of the purchased copies. Adelaide and Ted were there too, of course, greeting guests — a total of about 150 of them by my guess. Everyone stood around. Conversation largely consisted of talk about the recent elections, the War in Iraq, international affairs, interior decorating, fine art and the price of real estate — it has widely been reported, and denied that Ted and Adelaide would sell the property if the right person came along. Some said the property — without the buildings — could fetch $80 million. There were also discussions about the book, about the wonderful photographs that were in this edition, and about the grand, though financially difficult times the Bonackers had all those years ago. Now, with real estate prices through the roof, the Bonackers have moved away. They continue with their lifestyle, fishing and clamming, but now along the coastline of North Carolina, where they can afford to. At the brunch, even though the book was entirely about the Bonackers, there seemed to be just a few of them present — among them Arnold Leo.

* * *

The purpose of the dinner at the Shinnecock Tribal Reservation was Thanksgiving. It was a week before the American Thanksgiving, but it was the Tribal celebration of this day, and perhaps half the tribe, about 150 people, were seated at the tables in the Meeting Hall, along with about twenty invited guests, among them myself and my son, David Lion. Conversation was largely, almost entirely, about uncles and aunts and children and elders. This was a family affair and everybody wanted to know how everybody else was doing and who had

The Montauk Lighthouse in 2000

Surfer's Lament

To Save Montauk Lighthouse, We Have to Chance the Alamo

By Dan Rattiner

What is more important? Surfing? Or the Montauk Lighthouse? This question is sort of a trick question. About 99% of the population would say the Montauk Lighthouse. But about 1% of the population, representing those who surf and those who enjoy watching them surf and the whole surfing scene that surrounds them, would say Surfing.

But surfers are not dumb. What they really would say is the Montauk Lighthouse AND surfing. You can have both.

This question has come up this fall because the government has once again been presented with an erosion control problem on the cliff face of the Montauk Lighthouse. If they don't fix it by putting huge boulders in the surf in front of it in the next few years, this historic landmark will fall into the sea.

Putting boulders up, the surfers say, is bad for surfing in front of the Montauk Lighthouse. One of the favorite surfing spots in Montauk is right there in front of the lighthouse, and when conditions are right, the ride is terrific. They call it the Alamo. Now what they want to do is Save the Alamo from those trying to save the Montauk Lighthouse. And to do that, they say, instead of armoring the surfing area in front of the lighthouse, the Lighthouse should be moved back on the property. They even know where. It should be moved to the center of the loop road that runs up to where the Lighthouse is now. Put the Lighthouse in the loop, move all the parking that is currently inside the loop to somewhere else. And you save both the Lighthouse and the Alamo.

This proposal is worth considering. And as I think about it, among those who are qualified to think about this, is me.

The first "Saving of the Lighthouse" took place in 1966 and involved an article I wrote in this newspaper. The Coast Guard, which was in residence at the Lighthouse at the

JOHN STEINBECK, BORAT AND THE SOUP NAZI

By Dan Rattiner

The game console Sony PlayStation 3 came out in a store near you last week. This has been much anticipated and the lines were long everywhere and occasionally violent. Two armed men tried to rob people waiting in a line for PlayStations at a Wal-Mart in Putnam, Connecticut. When one refused, they shot him. In a store in Manchester, Connecticut, two men attacked a man and beat him until he handed over the PlayStation 3 he just purchased. The attackers fled. In Sullivan, Indiana, two other young men became violent when they realized the store was out of them, and one pulled a knife and attacked two other men heading for the door carrying a PlayStation 3. In the scuffle, the knife was kicked away, and then one of the attackers, Dylan Moss, 19, was injured by a stab wound with his own knife. In Allentown, Pennsylvania, a teenager got his PlayStation 3 safely out of the store, got into his car, locked the doors and started it up, but before he could leave, he was approached by two men who tapped on his windshield with a handgun. He rolled down his car window and handed his PlayStation 3 to them. In Fresno, California, a surging crowd trampled some of the slower people in the front of the line as they moved toward the PlayStation 3 counter. Six people were hospitalized.

Meanwhile, it's been announced that the PlayStation 3 is not as good as it was cracked up to be, when Sony originally said it was fully compatible with earlier models. Turns out that the console might or might not play the background music to the Tekken 5 combat game. Scenes from the Gran Turismo racing game sometimes freeze. The game Suikoden III can't read data from the first-generation PlayStation, and a virtual gun from the Biohazard game will not fire properly. Some of time, was every month measuring the distance from the edge of the Lighthouse to the edge of the cliff. In 1787, when the lighthouse was built on the orders of George Washington, it was 285 feet from the edge. In 1966 it was 51 feet from the edge, down from 56 feet from the year before. As was happening every year, storms from the Northeast were bashing into the cliff face, slowly eating away at it. I wondered, back then in 1966, what the Coast Guard intended to do when that number was zero. All you had to do was do the math. It seemed to be something that would happen in the 1980s.

I called the Coast Guard and was told this would not be a problem. The Coast Guard was planning to build a steel tower twice the height of the Lighthouse 500 feet back from where it is now, put a light on top of it, run it by remote control and "de-man" the old stone Lighthouse — as in abandon it — so it was free to collapse into the sea.

As a result of this I called all the townspeople and tourists to an event at the Lighthouse itself on a Saturday night where we would hold lanterns and flashlights and torches and all other means of lights to demonstrate our opposition to this plan. More than three thousand people, by police estimate, attended. And after four more vigils like this, the Coast Guard relented. They would not abandon the Lighthouse. They would preserve it. And then they helped in inscribing it into the Register of Historic Places.

If deciding NOT to abandon the lighthouse had been achieved, what could be done to stop the erosion? A woman named Giorgina Reid, who had come to the vigils, organized a group of volunteers to plant the dirt wall of the cliff in foliage so the root systems of the foliage would keep it from falling down. But this would work only if the government put a necklace of boulders around the base of the lighthouse. That was done, at considerable cost. And Mrs. Reid and her volunteers came every Sunday for the next fifteen years (!!!) and the erosion stopped.

It turned out, however, that these rock necklaces, continually pounded day and night by the surf, could only hold up for about twenty years. Around 1985, a new group of boulders were installed and more planting was done on the cliff face. That lasted until this year. Now it is apparent that something must be done again. And this time, they want to build not only a boulder necklace, but also an underwater offshore reef to break the waves before they hit the boulders. They say, and I believe them, that if they do this, the project will last fifty years.

The surfers maintain, however, that the project will destroy The Alamo. And surfing, as every surfer knows, is more important than life itself.

Can the Lighthouse be moved? Yes, it can. In the early 1980s, the Block Island Light, at Mohegan Bluffs on Block Island, was threatened with erosion. Steel was put under it, it was lifted up and put on wheels, and slowly moved about 200 feet further inland from its earlier precarious site. It suffered only very minor damage.

But the Block Island Light was moved along level ground. The Montauk Light sits on top of a hill called Turtle Hill. If you move it back from the cliff face in any possible direction, it has to go down the hill. And that cannot be done simply by putting it on a steel sled with wheels under it and towing it down. What happens is that the lighthouse tips as it goes down the hill, and all the internal stresses on this 350-year-old structure suddenly change. It was not designed for this. It was designed to stand straight up with its walls leaning in conical fashion toward one another and supporting one another. If you tip it, it will crumble and fall. Engineers have no doubt about it.

There IS a way to move it, however. You move it without tipping it. You move it sideways a bit, then drop it straight down a few feet, then sideways a bit and then drop it straight down a few feet again. It will hold up that way. At enormous expense. And with considerable risk. One little mistake, one false tip, and it's broken. This is a very big risk to take for a very valuable historic treasure.

The other problem with moving it has to do with sightlines. If you move it down the hill, it ceases to become a useful lighthouse. It is 80 feet tall now. Bring it down the hill and it is in

Seven Wineries on the North Fork are For Sale. Is this a Problem?

By Joan Zandell

Driving through the Hamptons on a beautiful fall afternoon, foliage aside, what is more visible than the blazing colors of the 'For Sale' signs? So why the sudden alarm when North Fork Wineries do the same?

Real estate agent Barry Novick of Brown, Harris, Stevens in Cutchogue, represents the Castello de Borghese Vineyard, the Schneider property, the Palmer Vineyard in Cutchogue, as well as the Sherwood House Vineyard, all located on the North Fork and all for sale. What is going on? In a recent telephone interview he seemed to feel all the recent negative press was unfounded.

"These vineyards are not new to the market," said Mr. Novick, "and you have to bear in mind that there are a limited amount of qualified buyers. A vineyard is not an easy sell, nor a quick sell. The ones I'm handling have been on the market for less than a year. Schneider was listed with someone else prior to listing with us. Some people look at purchasing a vineyard like purchasing a sports car. There's a lot of romance. In reality, it's farming and farming is risky. When living with the day-to-day realities, their enthusiasm wanes. Wine making is labor intensive and financially risky."

Mr. Novick then described the various phases of the buying and selling of vineyards.

"First, there were the pioneers. They had a passion for wine and a passion for the area. Examples are Hardgraves in 1973 and Bidwells in the 80s. They came out here with limited capitalization. In 1997-98, Hardgraves sold to Borghese. With the new wave came infusions of money and larger operations. Now we're going through the next new wave."

"There are about 33 vineyards on the North Fork," the realtor continued, "and out of those 33, only approximately 7 are on the market. That's not a lot. We're in our infancy here, compared to Europe. We're getting wonderful recognition and things are only going to get

IN PRAISE OF EAST HAMPTON HIGH SCHOOL

By David Lion Rattiner

I am so sick of hearing people talk about East Hampton High School like it is this violent and dangerous place. As a graduate of East Hampton High School, I take it pretty personally, especially when I think about my graduating class and all of the great things that so many of those students have gone on to do. Just about all of my friends went to and graduated college and are now working and doing well. One such friend is John Schrippa, who is now a supervisor at the Pentagon in Washington D.C. and just bought a condo in Arlington on his own. He is 24.

But the rumors about the school don't stop and I just don't get where they are coming from. "It's a pool of illegal immigrants! There are fights! There is racial violence! There are bomb threats! Prep schools are where I am sending my kids! I don't care what it costs, what choice do I have?"

You have got to be kidding me. Last time I checked, fights break out in prep schools too. You think drugs aren't running rampant through a prep school? Think again. I can't tell you how many burnouts I've known coming out of prep school. Illegal immigrants in the school are an issue because their families are not paying taxes to help pay for the school because they are not citizens. It's a problem the whole country has been experiencing for a long time, and the media and the country has spotlighted it this year. Something will be done.

But as far as safety and school quality, the teachers are still passionate, the ball fields are still vast and the group of kids that are coming out of there have bright futures ahead of them. It shouldn't be stated in any other way because that is the truth. When I was in high school six years ago, we had a few bad eggs too, but guess what? They were arrested or they shaped up.

Get It (continued from previous page)

better. The industry is still so new compared to Europe. Nevertheless, Robert Parker, of The Wine Advocate, gave the North Fork Wineries above a 90, which is a milestone for this region.

"I've sold a couple of wineries and I feel a strong sense of a commitment to the area. We might be going through some growing pains at the moment, but in the long term things will only get better. I believe that the industry is here to stay."

For those still wondering why sell now, Mr. Novick said, "One of the reasons is because of the tremendous increase in land value. Land values have escalated in the last five years. Valuation is based on land value and structure value and they will only continue to become more profitable. Take a look at Duck Walk Vineyards, for example, they are owned by the Pindar family and they've opened Duck Walk North on Route 25. That is positive reinvestment."

According to a recent article in Newsday, the Sherwood House Vineyards, which is for sale

I was not even a little surprised when I heard East Hampton High School senior Zach Brenneman got offered a full athletic scholarship to Notre Dame University (from the Rudy movie. Don't act like you didn't watch it a dozen times) for lacrosse. He's not from a prep school, but from East Hampton High School. Zach is a polite, well-rounded kid who will do well in life and he's got plenty of teachers from East Hampton High School to thank.

In last week's newspaper, you could see a picture of Zach signing a document that stated his intent to attend Notre Dame. But what was striking to me about the picture was not Zach, but good old coach Mike Burns (my old football coach), Ralph Naglierie, Zach's lacrosse coach (who by the way, is pretty much responsible for making lacrosse at East Hampton High School a reality) and many other directors, counselors and, of course, the principal. They all care about Zach and I can tell you how I know. Because Coach Mike Burns, Chris Tracy, Ms. O'Brien, David Douglas (my chorus teacher),

Mr. McGintee (JV football), Mrs. Finazzo (English), Coach Herzog (my track coach) and everybody else at that school all cared about my future, and when I see them in the street today, I smile and say hello and I am very happy to see them. There are very, very good people at that school and some very, very extraordinary kids.

I'm sorry for this rant, but it needs to be heard. Every single time I meet a parent with a kid on their way into high school, there is talk about the school that is negative. Well, you need to know that it is a good place to be and it still is, and will always produce some of the best kids you'll ever meet. East Hampton is a great place to grow up and East Hampton High School is a great place to go to school.

I'm not knocking prep schools, but you should send your kid there because you are fortunate enough to afford the higher pricetag, not because you think your kid is going to turn into a criminal if he or she stays here, or some other ridiculous thought.

Head down to any athletic event, school play or community project that the high school is involved in and you will see it first hand. You'll see a community of students, parents and teachers who are part of something very positive and very special. And when the students graduate, you'll see the majority of them studying at college or working hard and remembering the special times that they all shared together, whether it was a free period at the beach or a down-to-the-wire football game.

I think all of the above can be said about all the other high schools here on the East End, too.

Driving from Moriches to Bridgehampton: 30 Min.? 90 Min.?

By Sabrina C. Mashburn

When I began working at Dan's Papers in late September, I unknowingly joined the thousands of Long Islanders subject to Steve Levy's errant traffic control methods. My first commute from Quogue to Bridgehampton (via the Old Montauk Highway — Rt. 104 — 27 East — CR 39 — Montauk Highway route) took me about 45 minutes from my house to Dan's, from 9 to 9:50. After a few trips, I thought that I could probably squeeze in a horseback ride between waking and working in the morning, and I decided to leave my house around 7:30 a.m. from then on. I would get to the barn, ride from 8:30 to 9:30, and get to work around 10. It sounded like a simple plan, and the commute wasn't going to change any time soon. I was also told that if I learned to use the back roads, I might be able to shave ten or fifteen minutes from my trip. But, oh, how wrong I was.

During the month of October, on the first day of my new riding schedule, I left the house around 7:10 a.m., a bit on the early side just to be safe. After inching down Montauk Highway at 7:15, I sat on 27-East, and then CR-39, in bumper-to-bumper traffic, from 7:30 until 9:30 in the morning, blasting as much cheerful country music into my ears as I could to ward off any thoughts of driving down that open stretch of grass in the middle of the highway. I could have made it all the way to New York City in the time it took me to get from Quogue to Bridgehampton that morning. I called my parents, veterans of my horse-showing days when punctuality was key, and they suggested an alternate route. I could just get off of the highway on North Road, drive around the traffic, and merge right onto CR-39. I tried to tell them that the back roads had been closed, but they told me that no one would ever close the back roads — that would be a disaster. The next morning I was late for work, not only because of the traffic, but also because North

MONTAUK LOOKS TO THE STARS OF TOMORROW

By David Lion Rattiner

It was quite a scene on Monday out at the Third House at Theodore Roosevelt County Park in Montauk. Representatives, Board Members, politicians, grade school students, parents and astronomers all had smiles on their faces. The reason was because the non-profit organization known as The Montauk Observatory had an unveiling of their new 700 lbs telescope. At a given signal, a large cream-colored cloth was lifted off of it to the sound of cheers and applause. This unveiling is the first large step, of the many large steps, that the Montauk Observatory project will take to fulfill the dream of making a fully functional, astronomical observatory a reality in Montauk.

It seems that Montauk has a knack for this kind of thing, that is, at making the community a better and more fun place to live. "We are making plans for its permanent home but in the mean time it's on wheels. We need to raise money for it to have a home," said Susan Harder, a board member for the Montauk Observatory.

The telescope is a research grade telescope and is manufactured by Meade Instruments

Road had been blocked by a concrete barrier, forcing me to start all over again. After a few weeks of two-hour commutes, I began searching for apartments to rent in Bridgehampton, closer to work, and abandoned my dreams of riding horses in the morning until I found somewhere to live beyond the bottleneck.

Then, one day in October, the cones came. Anticipation for the cone plan was high at Dan's Papers — I am not the only one who travels East to get here — and as I saw them being set up, one by one, the day before they were implemented, I began to make a little wish list that included more sleep, more riding — maybe even breakfast. And the next day, it all came true. I left my house in Quogue around 8 a.m., and sped along to work in a record 30 minutes. Thirty minutes! Imagine that. That morning, I went riding, took a trip to Bridgehampton Commons, and even had a bite to eat before coming to work. The day after that, I slept until nine, left my house at 9:25, and got to Bridgehampton at 10:00 a.m. And so it went, through all (three?) of the lovely weeks of cones, I got to work every day on time, and had the option of sleeping until nine, or taking a long, leisurely ride in the sun, topped off by some breakfast at the Candy Kitchen — just what I imagined life on the East End to be when I took the job in the first place.

On November 10th, my dreams were shattered. One by one, they picked up those won-

Lanes are shifted by concrete barrier truck on Tappan Zee Bridge. derful cones and plopped me right back into a big, fat traffic jam that has ruined every morning since. This morning, I timed my commute precisely just to make sure that I wasn't embellishing. Here is what I found.

I left my house in Quogue around 8:50 a.m., I reached 104 by 9, and 27 East by 9:09. I drove at about 60 m.p.h. until 9:16, where I was forced to come to a halt in front of the New York State Department of Transportation Headquarters in Hampton Bays. I cranked my music up, and crawled along between 0 and 10 m.p.h. all the way to the Speed Zone Ahead signs leading up to the merge with CR-39. By 9:29, I had reached the Lobster Inn — progress! By 9:31, I was in front of Southampton Treasures, and got a really good, long look at the Velociraptor sculptures on the front drive. By 9:33, traffic came to a dead stop again, this time underneath a green light at the intersection of Tuckahoe Road and CR-39. Stopped under a green light — oh, the irony. At 9:35, a stack of orange cones on the back of an electrician's truck combined with the west-bound cars whizzing past added insult to injury. I accelerated to a barreling 5 m.p.h. all the way to the Southampton Driving Range, only to stop again. Once I made the turn onto 27 East, I was home free, and drove at a respectable 30 m.p.h. all the way to the Dan's Papers parking lot, where I parked, at 9:53.

So, there it is. It took me an hour and three minutes to drive the 19.33 miles that MapQuest.com outlines, and my cone-season trips confirmed, should take thirty minutes to traverse from door to door. The Southampton Town budget did not include provisions for year-round cones this year, despite Mr. Schneiderman's pleading on our behalf, and they will not be back until the high season starts up again. So, for now, all we can do is sit in traffic every morning, blast our music, and try as hard as we possibly can to resist the urge to drive up those wide, open center lawns and shoulder lanes.

Who's Here

By Debbie Tuma

You could easily say that Monica Asche, of Southampton, has "the golden touch." She has spent the past 25 years practicing the ancient art of "gilding" or gold-leafing, numerous antiques at posh estates from Southampton to Palm Beach. She has put the finishing gold touches on mirrors, picture frames, tables and chairs, from Gin Lane to Worth Avenue.

But most recently, she has brightened up the religious statues in the Our Lady of Poland Church, a small, intimate church located near the railroad station in Southampton. Her latest creations were the result of a "deal" she made with God when her mother became ill, during the 1980s.

"At the time, I was working out of my former studio, located in the red brick building near the railroad station. My mother was diagnosed with breast cancer," said Asche. "I used to walk to the Our Lady of Poland Church on my lunch hours to pray for my Mom, and one day I noticed that all their statues seemed dull and lifeless. They were just coated with gold paint, and they really needed the brilliance of real gold, to bring out their beauty."

Asche said she made a deal with God, praying that if He let her mother live, she would volunteer her time to touch up the statues in this church. "My mother lived another eight years, so after she died, I decided it was time to pay back my vow to repair these lovely statues," she explained. "I couldn't do it during the hot summer months, so I waited until this fall when the weather was a better temperature to gold-leaf these statues." She collaborated with Pastor Stanley Kondeja, of the Our Lady of Poland Church, who had first commissioned Asche in 2001 to gold-leaf and restore a framed picture in the church, which was used in a processional ceremony. It is a picture of the Lady of Czestochowa, or "Black Madonna," and it is installed in the back of the church, glazed with 23-karat gold leaf that Asche took a month to restore back to its original shine.

Over the past few months, Asche has now restored and touched up about ten other religious statues in the church, mostly around the altar. She gold-leafed the staffs and trim of two angels that flank the church altar, which were formerly done in copper. She also gold-leafed the Blessed Mother and Baby Jesus statues, which were the ones she prayed to when her mother was sick. "I added 23-karat gold-leaf to the Blessed Mother's crown, staff, shoes and also to the trim on Baby Jesus's robe," she explained. "just touching up this gold makes these statues look richer," she said.

Asche gold-leafed the crosses and trim on the Tabernacle doors, and on the rosary beads of St. Theresa. She gold-leafed the trim on the orb held by the Infant of Prague, another statue. She touched up the trim on the robe of St. Joseph, who is holding the Christ Child. She gold-leafed the Sacred Heart of Jesus Statue, and the statue of St. Anthony, holding the Christ Child. From a distance, all these gold touches give a shine, brightness, and even a glow to these statues in the church.

"My mother lived another eight years, so after she died, I decided it was time to pay back my vow to repair these lovely statues."

Father Stanley Kondeja, of Central Poland, who has been pastor of Our Lady of Poland Church for 12 years, said, "Monica is a treasure. We are so happy she has volunteered her time to help us make our statues more beautiful. Her attention to every detail, like the shoes, belts and stripes, have given these ordinary statues a nobility. She uplifted them to more beauty by these small, but meticulously done touches of gold." Father Kondeja was busy putting white and red flowers in his church in honor of Polish Independence Day, last Saturday, November 11.

Looking around at her finished collection of religious statues, Asche commented, "I came from a Polish family in Pennsylvania, and my mother would have adored this church."

Asche's interest in art, buildings and beautiful furnishings began during her early years in the airline industry, when she frequently traveled to Italy. "I adored Florence, and I loved the colors and textures of the frescoes," she recalled. "I decided to study hand-painted furniture and decoration, at Isabel O'Neil Studios in New York City during the 1970s. It was all the kinds of decorative arts that I had seen in Europe, including 18th Century hand-painted furniture and murals." She learned several different faux finishes, such as faux tortoise shell, marbleizing, wood graining, lapis lazuli, malachite, and bamboo, as well as wall glazing, murals and painted floor designs.

"We were taught to do these so professionally, that it is hard to tell the faux from the real thing," she said. "It is a rather rare and specialized art form that not a lot of artists do."

After finishing that school, Asche moved to San Francisco, California, where she helped a friend open a painting studio called Day Studio. She landed important commissions and worked in concert with other famous artists such as Donald La Bash, professor of Fine Arts at the University of San Francisco. In 1988, Asche opened her studio in Southampton, called Patina, on Powell Avenue. She eventually moved her business, now called, Monica Asche Studio, to its current location, in the Southampton artists' colony on Tuckahoe Lane.

Over the past 20 years, she has designed, consulted, and performed high-end and diverse work for private clients around the country. She has perfected her skills at the art of gilding, and is one of only a few artists still practicing this ancient technique. She also specializes in wall glazing, mural and historical painted restoration, and furniture design and painting.

The Soup Nazi on "Seinfeld," the man who would make you wait in line at his soup counter and then either allow you to buy the soup if you were polite and quiet, or throw you out while shouting "no soup for you" if you were bothersome, is going global.

Businessmen have made an arrangement with the scowling, military soup chef himself. Al Yeganeh has his name, so far, on the doors of eight "Original Soup Man" franchises in New York City. And he's about to open his newest soup store in Hanover Square where he will unveil a special soup he's invented for the Rangers hockey team. He's got three soup stores in the suburbs, one in Garden City, one in Princeton, New Jersey and one in West Nyack, and eight more have opened elsewhere in North America in places such as St. Louis and Toronto, and he has a plan for another 5,000 soup stores around the world. The company is also now marketing a line of canned soups which bear the scowling face of Yeganeh on the label saying, well, they don't have to spell it out for you. The Soup Nazi is coming to a supermarket near you.

Is his original store on West 55th Street still open? No it isn't. Yeganeh plans to make it either a shrine or museum to Yeganeh. No soup for you.

A company called Business Car Service has become so successful in Moscow that the government is now considering new laws to rein it in. Its activities have caused many traffic jams and auto accidents.

Business Car Service rents cars in bunches. When you sign on the dotted line, you get a whole entourage of cars, including one limousine in the center with various black cars with flashing blue lights on the roof at the front and rear to protect it. Also, sirens, official supporting documents in case the authorities want to look you over, and special license plates, which are a knockoff of the special AAA license plates giving high government officials, members of Parliament and special businessmen in government business permission to flout the traffic laws, and all appropriate chauffeurs and bodyguards. So now, you're a big shot. One call does it all. And the cost? Just $600 a day.

The business is less than a year old, but it now has more than a hundred of these motorcades roaring around Moscow with sirens blaring and lights flashing every day. There are so many that the sheer number of them creates a serious problem on the crowded streets of Moscow.

There are reports in the newspapers of all sorts of poor manners and crude behavior on the part of the drivers of these motorcades. Motorcades stop the traffic, and then pull into, well, the parking lots of supermarkets where the big shot might just need a pack of cigarettes. For those inconvenienced, it is infuriating. And now it is commonplace that a planned twenty-minute journey takes forty. And forty-minute journeys take an hour ten. But worse, people have now become unclear about which vehicles are responding to true emergencies and which are not. Chaos has arrived.

The new legislation would severely limit both the number of people and the level of officialdom that are permitted to have cavalcades. It is endorsed by President Putin.

It does occur to me that such a rental operation might present a real business opportunity here in the Hamptons.

The Steinbeck heirs are making their claim for Steinbeck's work as a result of a new federal law that went into effect a few years ago, known as the Sonny Bono Copyright Extension Act. This was passed in 1998 after the untimely death of that singer and Congressman. Bono's heirs demanded and got the rights to Bono's work.

Some of Steinbeck's books include Of Mice and Men, The Grapes of Wrath, Tortilla Flats, The Red Pony and The Pastures of Heaven.

John Steinbeck and his wife, Elaine, spent their last twenty years in Sag Harbor, New York, where John wrote his final novel, Travels With Charley. Steinbeck became the first honoree for the Sag Harbor Whaler's Festival. And his memory in that town and in the community are noted with the holding of the annual John Steinbeck Writer's Event and the John Steinbeck's Writer's Program. There is also a plaque honoring him on the windmill at the base of Long Wharf in Sag Harbor. A stage in the Bay Street Theatre is named for his wife.

Have you seen the movie Borat? The movie grossed $90 million in its first three weeks. It will make a lot of very ugly, stupid and bigoted people rich beyond their wildest dreams. These are not the stars, these are the ordinary people who had all the minor roles in the film. They are all suing the major players, including Borat (Sacha Baron Cohen) for libel and defamation.

The three college guys in the trailer say the producers got them all drunk so they didn't know what they were doing when they signed the waiver. And then they said all these bigoted things they would never say in public.

The 30 people who played the part of villagers in Borat's hometown in Kazakhstan are suing because they were only paid the equivalent of $3.60 each to make appearances and now there is $90 million on the table.

They are, by the way, not from Kazakhstan. They are gypsies living in a tiny village 80 miles outside of the capital of Romania with neither electricity or running water. They are a proud people. Now they've been made to look like fools. The producers made them put animals in their living rooms, made them mess up their usually spotlessly broom-cleaned village, and made them pretend they were peasants from Kazakhstan. They've been defamed.

The Pentecostal Church elders are suing because they were lied to. The producers told them this would be a small documentary. They were deceived. And they want restitution to their reputation too.

"For some reason, I really enjoy doing meticulous work, with fine attention to detail," said Asche, who claims she can spend hours working on minute details on pieces of furniture. Her airy, spacious studio is testament to this, as all around are works in progress, of Swedish chairs from the 1800s trimmed in gold leaf, Chinese and Japanese painted screens, old Italian painted furniture, an inlaid tortoise shell table, and giant Renaissance-like murals.

"I love the challenge of bringing them back to the gilded era," said Asche. "My customers get so excited when they see their pieces restored to their original beauty. In this day and age of the high-speed computers and iPods, I find that I'm sort of a throwback to another time, where the Master craftsmen were greatly appreciated, with their methodical hand-painted, custom-designed, painstaking work."

Lighthouse (continued from page 26)

a hole sticking up only 40 feet. From certain angles, ships will not be able to see the lighthouse. The only remedy is to raise the light up. So you could put it on a big forty-foot tall dirt pile. Or you could put a steel tower on top of the lighthouse with the light 40 feet way up on top of the tower. Somehow, neither of these possibilities is appealing.

Will the placing of the boulders really change the Alamo? The answer to this is that it sure will. It could put an end to it. Or it will move it over and make it even bigger. Who knows?

The government, before submitting their plan to build the boulder necklace, actually went to the trouble of building a scale model in a water tank in a lab up in Connecticut. They also did computer simulations. They wanted to see the best way to calm the crashing waves on the 300-foot stretch where it hits the cliff face, and they did see it. But as a bonus, they were able to see what would happen to the Alamo. Their tests showed that NOTHING happened to the Alamo.

But consider the government record in predicting changes in tides, erosion and drift. It's been pretty dismal. As a matter of fact, the record of the surfers in predicting any changes has been dismal. That's why they issue Surf Reports. Someone finds that the surf is up over here or over there and that's where everybody goes that day. These spots do change over time. And nobody really knows when or why. The truth is that whenever a Surfing Contest is held in Montauk, they hold it at Ditch. The Alamo, like many other surfing spot such as Turtle Cove, Terrace and Trailer Park, is not predictable.

And so, it seems to me, we've got to give the new boulder configuration a try. Surfing will go on, here, there and everywhere. The battle against erosion at this national monument will go on. One very encouraging thing is that the current measurement between the Lighthouse and the cliff face is now 71 feet.

Whatever they're doing, it's working. •

At the time, in 1931, owning these big homes presented insurmountable tax obligations to their owners, who were, by this time, two generations removed from their builders. If the abandoned buildings could be knocked down, the owners would save repair costs and, because the result would just be vacant land, homeowners would save on real estate tax bills. And so there arrived on the scene a blind black man of Shinnecock Indian heritage known simply as Horace, who reportedly had been born and raised in Georgia.

Horace was big, slow moving and gentle, with a remarkable ability to be able to arrange to safely dynamite any home without causing damage to anything around it. He would spend a half a day pacing around a property that needed to be taken down, then pace over to homes on either side, carefully touching everything and placing in his memory every piece of information necessary to do the job.

Eventually, he would plant his moccasined feet on the ground several hundred yards in front of the mansion's front door, announce how many sticks would be needed and then say exactly how they needed to be placed. When the dynamite went off, pieces of the house would fly high into the sky in a huge conflagration of smoke, fire and pieces of wood. And almost every time, the debris would land in a big circle on the property, with the outer perimeter of the circle just six feet from where he stood.

This happened every time, except once, which of course was his last time. After his body was pulled out from under the porch roof that fell on him, and after he was carried off to his expected burial site up in the northern reaches of Hampton Bays, men who searched his pockets found the piece of paper in his pocket upon which he had figured his calculations for this job, and they noted the error in the mathematics he had made.

"He should have checked his work," the minister presiding at this burial said.

Today, only 13 of these early mansions remain on the beach today. Some of them have recently sold for more than $40 million. •

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

PS3

There have been reports of shootings, fist fights, waiting out in the cold for days and face to face robberies over the new Play Station 3, Sony's new game system that is the hot item this Christmas. I feel bad for parents this year. Not only is PS3 nearly impossible to get, it is also unusually expensive. The system retails for $600, but on eBay, parents are shelling out thousands of dollars to put a smile on little Timmy's face.

I have been in a great dilemma when it comes to this game system because frankly, I am due for a new game system. The last game system I played was Microsoft's X-Box, which I literally spent a semester playing in college.

But those days are over and my plans on getting the upgraded X-Box, the X-Box 360, were halted after the rumor spread amongst my friends and my brother about how sweet the new Play Station 3 was going to be. About three months ago, I had a conversation with my brother Gabe that went something like this,

"What do you think, Gabe? Play Station 3 or X-Box?"

"The 360?"

"Yes."

"Play Station 3, no question."

"But it's six-hundred dollars."

"Then you are not for real."

He had a point. A dedicated gamer would not question the price if what the gaming system did was spectacular. It wasn't so much that I am not a dedicated gamer, it is just that I am horrendously cheap. I literally have panic attacks when I buy popcorn at movie theaters.

And so I have waited on my purchase of a new video game system. I decided to wait for Play Station 3 to come out and see if it was really worth it. According to The New York Times, it isn't all that great. Although the graphics are fantastic, as far as playability, it is kind of slow and more complicated than it needs to be. The X-Box 360 costs about $300, the PS3 costs $600. What do you think I am going to do?

What really bothers me about this whole thing is that I have come to realize how much of a loser I am. Am I seriously spending this much mental energy and money on a video game system? I'm a grown man, for crying out loud! But I'm not the only one.

My technically savvy, college buddy Peter, who still lives up in Boston and does IT for a large bank there sent me a custom technical analysis using a spreadsheet to compare the two systems which I think he spent a weekend creating. He came to the conclusion that X-Box 360 does pretty much the same thing Play Station 3 does, which is what The New York Times also said. Not to mention my hands are better suited for the large X-Box controller in comparison to the small Play Station controllers.

I'm very happy about this because I was seriously emotionally preparing myself to spend $600 on a video game system once Play Station 3 became buyable again, and now I just have to spend $300, which is also a ridiculous amount of money, but it doesn't feel that bad.

Every Christmas there is a present that is the hot present and this year is no different. Last year, if I didn't get an iPod, I might have jumped off of the Brooklyn Bridge. I remember vividly how important it was to me to get a remote control car called Fast Traxx one year when I was about ten. My parents must have spent $150 on it. I think I broke the car in a month. Another year, I think I might have died if I didn't receive something called Game Gear, which was a hand held video game system. I never really got hooked to that for very long. The batteries on it lasted about twelve minutes. There was that one year where everyone was going bananas over Furbies, a doll that you had to take care of and if you didn't it would die or get depressed. I think my little sister got one of those dolls. It's dead now, of course.

I don't know how they do it, but somehow the big companies figure out how to make me, and the rest of us, completely insane. I keep expecting this to wear off as I get older, but just yesterday I saw my Dad dancing around the house because he just got the new Blackberry as an early Christmas/Chanukah present for himself (my Dad is Jewish, but he celebrates Christmas because "it's fun to.")

"Son, come over here and check out my new Blackberry."

"Oh wow, that's pretty cool. What does it do?"

"I don't know really. It's a cell phone! I think you can use the Internet with it. But look how cool it is."

"How much was it?"

"$399. I got a deal with the rebate!"

Like I said, insane.

some sort of accomplishment and who had some sort of trouble and how they might help. The tribe is a family after all. People sat for the most part at the tables and talked with one another or visited with some people at another table. There was much hugging going on.

There was a podium with a microphone. Lance Gumbs, who is on the Tribal Council, acted as Master of Ceremonies and some of the guests were introduced, and one in particular, Dr. Linda Bruno, who is about to retire from her post as School Superintendant was given an award of a beautiful Indian blanket to wear around her shoulders for the help she had given to the tribe. As part of the ceremony, half a dozen different tribal women, one at a time, walked up and hugged her and kissed her. The lead woman had been Lance's mother, Harriet, now in her 80s. There were young men sitting on the floor in the back, beating drums and chanting. People applauded when Dr. Bruno thanked everyone. It was a moving ceremony.

The dinner, served from a buffet by waiters and waitresses who were mostly young teenage tribal members (several girls wore black t-shirts that had big block print white letters on the back that read TRIBAL CLEAN-UP. I noted to Ron Richard with whom I was sitting that there would be no getting out of that job.)

When it was over, the entire waitstaff and the kitchen staff were invited by Lance to come out into the main dining hall and get a round of applause for the wonderful meal. Some came out, then more, then when all of them were out, they were cheered and applauded.

At another point, two young women stood up front and held up sweat shirts with the very colorful great seal of the Shinnecock Indian Nation on it. They would cost $20 for a regular sweatshirt or $45 for a hooded sweatshirt with a zipper. I bought one. Other tribal members went around selling lottery tickets. I bought some of those.

Serving the brunch at de Menil's was a well dressed professional catering staff in the traditional white shirt and black trousers uniform.

This was not an egg and omelette and orange juice brunch. It was a put-some-hair-on-your-chest brunch consisting of raw clams and oysters on the half shell with hot sauce, served out on the front porch of the barn as you came in. Once inside, there was a bar with Bloody Marys, Vodka or Scotch straight up if that's what you wanted, but no orange juice. There were also breakfast quiches and shrimp cocktail with red sauce. Later, there was milder fare — fresh baked cakes and rolls and coffee to cool you down. The book being re-issued was hardbound, beautifully boxed, and numbered in an edition of 500. You could buy one for $1,200, with a portion of the proceeds going to benefit the East Hampton Town Baymen's Association and the Peconic Baykeeper. Chris and I split the cost of buying one.

The Shinnecock Thanksgiving dinner was cooked right there in the kitchen of the meeting house and it consisted of big portions of turkey, stuffing, gravy, sliced pork, sweet potatoes, string beans and spinach piled high on big plates. The drink was apple cider.

At the dinner, I talked with Dwayne Duncan, who I know and who works as a bus driver for the Hampton Jitney, with Ron Richard, who proudly told us about his son at the Ross School and his daughter at Yale. I also talked with Lance Gumbs about the hopes and dreams the tribe has for federal recognition and the ability to create a gambling casino. Such a casino would solve many of the tribe's financial problems. Almost all politicians off the reservation favor eventual federal recognition but oppose the casino plan, at least in the narrow confines of the East End. Lance pointed out that with federal recognition comes the right to build a casino.

ROBERT ALTMAN, 81

Robert Altman, star of this year's "A Conversation With" panel at the Hamptons International Film Festival, passed away Monday, November 20. A tireless creator, Altman once, ironically now, quipped, "Retirement? You're talking about death, right?" Now that he has retired, his collection of songs, plays, films and television shows, as well as a colorful life story, will be his legacy.

Robert Altman was born in Kansas City, Missouri, on February 20, 1925. In 1945, he skipped college to join the United States Air Force, and was soon the copilot of a B-24. However, his fascination with the movies soon overtook his military aspirations, and he and his first wife, Yvonne, moved to Hollywood. After brief stints as an actor, screenwriter, and Broadway-style musical writer, he accepted a job as the publicity director of a pet-identification company.

Creative in all of his endeavors, Altman devised a way to "Identi-Code" animals by tattooing a code on them, which could be used to identify lost pets. His system was so successful that he was asked to tattoo President Truman's dog, among many others. In 1950, Altman returned home to Kansas City to work for a local film production company called Calvin Co. At Calvin Co., the young filmmaker wrote, edited and directed over sixty short films, as well as one feature film, The Delinquents (1957). When not producing films for Calvin Co., he wrote another feature, produced a television series, and direct-through Brown, Harris, Stevens, via Mr. Novick, recently opened a small tasting room that helped boost sales this year by a whopping 350 percent. Sherwood House is a 36-acre property that has 27 planted acres producing 1200 cases of wine a year. The hoped-for sale includes the land, the brand name, 7000 cases of wine and the tasting room.

Bruce Schneider of Schneider Vineyards is the third generation of his family to work in the wine industry. He apprenticed in Burgundy, France from 1987-90 at a vineyard known as Domaine Pierre Boillot in Mersault. As a result, Mr. Schneider, working with Mr. Boillot's nephew, had the opportunity to experience the hands-on nature of the business. "I got to see that it's really a way of life," said Mr. Schneider in a recent telephone interview, "and a very balanced way of life at that, mixed with hard work, good food and family at the center. The great thing is seeing the intimacy from the ground up. There are different philosophies and business models. I saw someone raising the quality of the wines in that vineyard, and that made me very passionate about the product."

"I love all aspects of wine making. Over 12 years, I've honed my skills. I work as a marketing consultant in the wine industry and work with wines from all over the world, particularly Chile and Germany. I travel to meet wine makers. Our tasting room is a co-operative group, we are a boutique business and our wines retail at $25-$40 a bottle. We produce fewer than 2000 cases a year. My preference is the Cabernet franc grape as the base for our wines. It is food friendly and age worthy. That's where the passion and artistry come in. In our case, we're selling a piece of real estate, and for us, it's part of a lifestyle. These are lifestyle businesses and investors involved at varying levels. As lives evolve, they have to make choices about lifestyle. Selling is inevitable."

The Lieb House Vineyards represented by Ed Petrie of Sotheby's, is described as being in the midst of "50 plus, manicured award-winning vineyard acres in the heart of Long Island's picturesque wine country." Mr. Petrie was on vacation at the time of the writing of this article, and so was unavailable for comment.

He is correct about that.

At the brunch, I talked to Adelaide de Menil about her plan to return all of these historic buildings back into the East Hampton community. She has held them and protected them and maintained them for an entire generation at her own expense. Now she hopes to give them back, also at her own expense. She offered one to the East Hampton Library (it was politely refused — they don't have room on the property anymore), and she offered two to the Town Marine Museum on Bluff Road that will be accepted. Six of them are intended to be placed on the campus of East Hampton Town Hall, where they will serve as offices. There are discussions underway on where to put the rest.

I also spoke with Ted Carpenter, who showed me photographs taken on a small island in the Arctic Sea north of Siberia. Ted is an anthropologist and in visiting there he and others recovered Indian artifacts dating back as far as 30,000 B.C. He showed me photographs of some of their finds, all of which have been chipped out of the frozen Arctic ice. They are in magnificent condition. They include arrowheads, harpoon spears, ropes and boat spars. He hopes to go back there soon to search for more.

I first met Adelaide de Menil in 1973 out in front of the East Hampton Post Office. She was looking intently through the lens of a camera she had mounted on a tri-pod that was focused westward, up the Montauk Highway toward town, where little by little, workmen were moving a cottage built in 1773 called "The Purple House" from the East Hampton Library property down the street to her home-site on Further Lane. Overhead wires were down. A workman on the white line was clutching a traffic light. A truck driver was at the wheel of a large truck pulling a steel platform that supported the old home. It was on wheels. I asked Adelaide what she was doing and she told me she was making a film. The camera was automatically taking one frame per second. And in the end, when you replayed it at regular speed, it would appear to show the whole day's move in just twenty minutes.

I met Harriet Gumbs in 1963. She was attending an event at the Scotch Mist Inn in Southampton, a beautiful old mansion that looked down a sweeping lawn to the Indian Reservation and Shinnecock Bay and ocean beyond.

The Scotch Mist Inn had been sold. It was about to become the administration building for a new college and there was some event or other taking place there. We talked about the coming LIU Southampton College and about the tribe and the elders who ran the tribal council at that time. The elder's policy was that everything was secret. It was nobody's business what went on there, and whenever I called them to ask about something, that's what they told me. At the Scotch Mist Inn I complained to her about that, and she said that was just the way it was. Her son Lance must have been about five years old at the time.

I have a photograph of she and I standing on the porch of the Inn that year somewhere. At the dinner, I went over and we gave one another a big hug.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY • Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages. Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find.

The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

A Unique Concept That Will Revolutionize Dental Implant Treatment

HAVE YOU LOST OR ARE YOU LOSING YOUR TEETH?

If so, you may be a candidate for Dental Implants.
At the offices of Dr. Howard A. Popper we have placed thousands of implants since 1985, including Long Island's FIRST "Teeth in an Hour" THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR EXPERIENCE.

Your life can be dramatically transformed with the immediate load-immediate function-immediate smile procedure utilizing THE NEW NOBEL GUIDE FOR COMPUTER-GUIDED, minimally invasive, flapless, pain free implant surgery. Dental implants improve appearance, comfort, speech, confidence, self-esteem and maintain your bone for a lifetime. Dental implants contribute to better overall health and improve quality of life for patients.

Teeth in an Hour, the latest concept in high-tech dentistry. Sophisticated 3-D radiology creates precise imaging of patient's jaw, and robotic technology in Sweden fabricates the permanent restoration which is placed with the Branemark System Implants - in the space of one hour.

The Branemark Novum System™ can provide patients with implants and permanent teeth all in one day, AND THE NEW-ALL-ON-4 can provide low-cost acrylic bridges in one day.

Implants can secure dentures, restore chewing and enjoyment of food, and impede progressive jawbone loss. No more wobbling dentures, irritated gums, gooey adhesives and filed down teeth for bridgework. Single teeth to full-mouth treatment, utilizing NOBEL PERFECT Implants for optimum esthetics.

Without good periodontal health, there can not be good general health. Periodontal disease (commonly known as gum disease) can affect the state of your whole body. Over the past few years, studies have shown a definitive link between your oral health and your general health, including heart disease and diabetes.

Traditional periodontal and implant therapy available with intravenous sedation, administered by a certified anesthesiologist.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander Number The Silence of the Butterballs

"Bill, I said get an 16 pound turkey max, for eight people. Two pounds per person is all you need to feed everyone and still have a few days' leftovers. This is 26 pounds. We'll be eating this till Christmas!"

"I love turkey, Peg. There won't be that much left over after Thanksgiving. You always make a big deal out of everything."

"Fine! But I don't want to hear any complaints about leftovers!"

Thursday: Thanksgiving dinner; traditional fare with white meat and dark meat sliced.

Friday: "Don't make dinner, Peg. Just warm me a plate of leftovers. There's still plenty of everything."

Saturday: "Hey, Peg, what's better than a Thanksgiving sandwich with the last of the stuffing and cranberry sauce and some sliced turkey? See, I told you I love the stuff!"

Sunday: "You're boiling the carcass for turkey soup, Peg? No, no... I'm so tired of it. Smells great!"

Monday: "Thanks for the sliced turkey and lettuce sandwich in my lunch, Peg. No, I loved it. All the guys had turkey sandwiches today. We all love turkey."

Tuesday: "No, Peg. The turkey salad sandwich was great. How much turkey is left, hun? That much, eh?"

Wednesday: "Turkey frittatas for dinner?"

Sounds nice, Peg. I never had turkey in a frittata before. I'm sure it will be delicious."

Thursday: "Well sure, I prefer meatballs in the spaghetti because it's traditional. There are no turkeys in Italy and I don't think turkey spaghetti is on any menu in Rome... I know what I said, but Peggy you can't have that much turkey left. I think you're importing leftovers from the neighbors."

Friday: "Peg, just throw the rest out in the yard. The turkey is so dry, I chipped a tooth on the turkey melt you made. Not even cheese can soften it anymore. Yea, yea, okay, you made your point. I bought a turkey that was too big. No, no... not because I was wrong, don't put words in my mouth! It was the right size turkey if everyone had shown up."

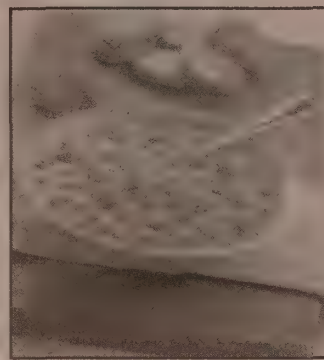

Saturday: "Hey Bill! What's up? Doing a little shingle repair today?"

"Hey Frank! Beautiful day, ain't it? What's up with you?"

"I'm good. Getting sick of all these turkey leftovers though."

"Well, how big of a turkey did you buy, Frank?"

"Got a twenty-pounder. Figured it was good for Thanksgiving and few days of leftovers, but Jeannie just can't get rid of the stuff."

"How many people did you have over?"

"Just five. Me, Jeannie and the kids."

"See, that's your mistake. You gotta figure only two pounds of bird per person. A ten-pounder would have done you fine, I'm surprised you didn't know that Frank."

"Are you tellin' me you don't have any leftovers?"

"Nope, all gone."

"Oh yeah? How'd you do it? I know you bought a huge bird, Peg told Jeannie."

"See my new shingles, Frank?"

"Damn... siding by Butterball. Brilliant. Jeannie's been raggin' on me to side the porch. Think this will work with Louis Rich leftovers?"

"Oh, yeah. Tony down the street used Louis Rich. Has a slightly more teak color to it. The Butterball has the nice weathered oak patina. I can give you my leftovers. I got about twenty slices."

"Okay, but don't tell Peg, Bill, she'll tell Jeannie."

"What, you think Peg knows I'm doing this? It's the Butterball brotherhood, man. Omerta, code of silence... you can tell your wife you used her leftover turkey for siding, but then the rest of us will have to kill ya..."

out in California. It is a very impressive device. It is a twenty-inch telescope, a device that Meade Instruments had never produced before. The advanced telescope is going to be able to view deep space. Every astronomer at the unveiling was very excited about it, with some stating it was the best possible telescope the observatory could have obtained. The telescope cost was about $35,000. The money was raised privately along with legislator Jay Schneiderman who obtained a grant for $25,000. Fred Thiele also gave $1000 of state funds for its purchase. It will take a couple of days to calibrate the device, which will hopefully within the next couple of years be the heart of a facility that will be yet another place for visitors and residents of Montauk to enjoy. About $500,000 needs to be raised for the physical structure that it is hoped will be built and fundraising efforts are underway.

State Assemblyman Fred Thiele spoke at the press conference along with County Legislator Jay Schneiderman. Both men were visibly excited about the telescope. Each of them talked about their childhood experiences where their parents pointed out celestial objects to them and they said that they wanted to share that experience with their children.

Of course, as construction happens, it will be in the spirit of the Third House, which by the way is an official Dark Sky Park, meaning that it will be a place that will perpetually be kept dark, in order to provide a place for astronomers to observe the night sky and study about the world beyond.

The exterior of the observatory is going to be in keeping with the camp atmosphere and the observatory is going to be behind the Third House building and attached to an existing cabin, which will have to be renovated. Everything offered to the public is going to be free and observatory members are going to start having some lectures with astronomers in the near future at different Hampton venues. You can keep updated on these kinds of things at www.montaukobservatory.com. You can also donate money here, (wink, wink).

The board of directors for the project is truly diverse set of individuals as far as their professional background is concerned. David Larkin, the president of the board, is the managing director of D2C2, which he also owns. His company manages and invests in unique entrepreneurial companies that are at the forefront of change in traditional industries. Susan Harder is the founder of the Dark Sky Society, Terry Beinstock who is the CEO of World Extend, a distributor of hosted desktop applications and secure remote access services. And of course there is John Imperatore, a real estate broker and astronomist.

To infinity, and beyond.

ed a community theater troupe. Before the release of The Delinquents, Robert Altman returned to Hollywood once again, this time to direct Alfred Hitchcock's television show, "Alfred Hitchcock Presents." He continued to direct television shows until he was offered the script for the 1970 hit film MASH. Directing MASH put Robert Altman on Hollywood's A-list, and he produced consistently brilliant work from that day forward.

In 2006, Altman received an honorary Oscar Award for Lifetime Achievement in Film. He has also been honored with the New York Film Critic's Circle Award for Best Director and Best Picture (Nashville, 1975). His many films, including Gosford Park (2001), The Player (1992), Nashville (1975), and MASH (1970), placed him in the very top echelon of Hollywood writers, directors and producers.

Always modest about his success, Altman claimed that his signature directorial style was simply an amalgamation of other directors' styles. "Everything I've learned has come from other directors: Bergman, Fellini, Kurosawa, Huston and Renoir," he explained. Anyone who has been fortunate enough to see or participate in his films knows that, for all his humility, Robert Altman was one of a kind. Credited with coaxing great performances from all of his actors, he led six of them, including Lily Tomlin and Helen Mirrin, in Academy Award-winning performances.

Robert Altman was as prolific in family making as he was in filmmaking, and he is survived by his wife, Kathryn Reed, and sons Robert, Matthew, Stephen, and Mike, his daughter, Christine, and stepdaughter, Konni Corriere.

Robert Altman once said, "filmmaking is a chance to live many lifetimes;" the many lifetimes he created in his films enriched the lives of all who had the pleasure of watching them. He will be missed.

The Roving Sommelier.....

Soul Mate Wanted: Must Be Complex, Elegant, Food-Friendly

A Match Made In Heaven, Or At Least A Four Star Restaurant, Can Approach Perfection

By Chris Miller

Many of my clients and students have recently been asking for a genius way to solve the conundrum of matching wine and food, a hot topic at the moment. Part of this perplexity is due to the ever-expanding selection of wines available, and part is due to our evolving cuisine. During the past decade our food and wine palates have evolved so much that "white with fish, red with meat" has really become obsolete. Still, there are a few rules.

Tannic wines are best for steaks that are grilled or sautéed. Crisp white wines are best suited to fish or chicken dishes that have a rich or creamy sauce. Never serve Cabernet Sauvignon with shellfish. Always be careful of artichokes with any wine. Ditto for asparagus.

Despite these rules there is lots of flexibility when it comes to bending them, with two exceptions. A Cabernet Sauvignon will always taste of iodine when paired with shellfish, and artichokes will always make pretty much any wine taste like metal. As a European and CIA trained chef, I have found a few strict rules I am able to work around by adjusting the dish. Asparagus, for instance, is a very difficult companion to wine, but if grilled with a good dose of high quality olive oil and finished with some freshly grated Parmesan and grilled Pancetta, it will pair quite nicely to several styles of Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc.

There are many little tricks like these that a wine savvy chef can do to help with wine and food pairing. Most of my tricks I taught myself while creating wine dinners at my former restaurant.

Wine dinners are the best tool for a restaurant chef to learn and practice wine pairing methods. I have been lucky to be on all three sides of a wine dinner program: sommelier, chef and consumer. The last several years I have attended wine dinners at La Cote Basque, Daniel and The Four Seasons, and the food is always quite good. This year's Daniel dinner featured the wines of Joseph Phelps Winery, and it was exceptional. The food was specifically prepared to pair with each wine. The food was of such a level that Daniel himself was willing to make an appearance with the hosts, Michael Aaron of Sherry-Lehmann, Mark Lauber of Lauber

Imports, and Tom Shelton of Joseph Phelps Winery. We were informed that Daniel and his Sommelier Philippe Marchal worked with the wines several days in advance to create the best pairings possible. The dinner was unusual because all the wines served were red, and big reds at that.

The first course was a lobster dish that was garnished with chorizo sausage to help the dish pair with J. Phelps Le Mistral, a deep, dark red from Monterey vineyards. Le Mistral is a Rhône blend of Syrah, Grenache, Petite Sirah and Alicante Bouschet. Not only did the match work great due to the chorizo, I suspect the chef also used a touch of the wine in the gentle sauce accompanying the dish. Later courses were also exceptional but not such tricky matches. A beef course (braised short rib and filet mignon) and a cheese course paired with J. Phelps Cabernet Sauvignon and Insignia from several different vintages, including the excellent maturing 1996, were pretty simple pairings but delicious none the less.

With wine dinners and restaurant dining, the wine and food pairing responsibility can be put on someone else, such as a sommelier, but for dining at home you may need some advice. As we eat lighter and healthier, the wines we choose should reflect that, and most wines that are best suited for today's "lighter fare" are not those that garner the stunning scores from critics – Robert Parker and Wine Spectator mostly – with their school-like numbers.

Interestingly, we are learning and adjusting our wine selections to be more food friendly. For instance, oaky white wines often overpower lighter cuisine and lately the market has sought-out crisper, cleaner wines such as Chablis, Sancerre and New Zealand Sauvignon Blancs. We have even seen more Chardonnay labeled as Un-Oaked Chardonnay, that trend started in Australia, but I have seen

Letter From Dan's Wine Guide Editor: From Cutchogue To The Cote d'Or

If a braised lamb shank could order wine, it might say something like this: "Have you a nice little Claret? Or maybe a Pommard? Please, hold the Opus One for my dinner partner, the grilled rib-eye. He can handle those 100-point tannins."

As writer Chris Miller points out in "Soul Mate Wanted," the old saw "white with fish, red with meat" is really outdated. Today we need to seek out wines that compliment the lighter fare we also favor. So the former '21' Club sommelier offers advice on how and what to serve together. If a few things consciously learned will push toward perfection what might otherwise be an ordinary act, follow Chris' pairing suggestions and avoid yet another bad blind date. Remember, bigger isn't always better, especially when it comes to wine.

Bedell Cellars is one of the oldest vineyards on Long Island. Founded by Kip and Susan Bedell in 1979 the vineyard – along with Corey Creek just down the road – is meticulously overseen by new talent Trent Prezler, part of a team assembled by owner Michael Lynne, along with John Levenberg and Kelly Urbanik. Lenn Thompson catches up with Trent in "Out of the Cellar and into the World," a candid Q&A with the COO who's helping to usher Bedell wines into the new century.

Two more vineyards hit the auction block – Sherwood House and Lieb Cellars – joining Ackerly Pond, Schneider, Galluccio and Borghese. Mass exodus or golden opportunity for new owners and ideas? Depends who you ask. And while you ponder the Long Island wine region's present state, partner Hal Ginsburg at Clovis Point bets on the future, with three wines currently in release and plans to open a tasting room on his Jamesport property.

As for me, I have been supremely lucky (and as a result nothing short of rapturous) over recent opportunities to taste some of the world's indisputably great wines. While we often pour local wines at home – the Lenz 2001 Cabernet Sauvignon, Bedell's 2005 CC Rosé, and Borghese's 2002 Pinot Noir are current personal favorites – David and I have decided that life is too short to miss out on the wine world's greatest offerings. And so we have tasted, or more accurately swooned over, a sumptuous 1997 Il Poggione Brunello di Montalcino Riserva and a 1990 Domaine LeRoy Richebourg (best wine I have tasted to date).

Brunello is a new passion of David's that I am delighted to abet. Proof is in the cellar waiting for us to taste: a 1997 Madonna del Piano Brunello di Montalcino, and a rare 1995 Soldera Brunello di Montalcino Riserva Intistieti.

Good Brunellos are great food wines, but our hearts really belong to the Cote d'Or, and what could possibly make them beat faster than a Grand Cru red from the incomparable (and impossible to find) Domaine de la Romanée-Conti. Luck brought us a deal on a 1997 DRC Richebourg, and a 1995 Leroy Latricieres Chambertin also awaits. But the crown jewel is the 1985 DRC Richebourg. Pale and fragile now with age, it will be a magical moment (and special occasion) indeed when the cork is pulled. I can see it in my mind's eye: a little bit of ruby-colored history spilling into a glass. Cheers.

OVER THE BARREL...

with Lenn Thompson

It's Just a Natural Progression... And Opportunity

You've probably heard that two more local wine producers – Sherwood House Vineyards and Lieb Family Cellars – have put property up for sale. Dr. Charles and Barbara Smithen, current owners of Sherwood House, are asking $4.1 million for their 36-acre Mattituck property, while Mark and Kathy Lieb are asking $7.75 million for their vineyard house and 47.5 acres of property in Cutchogue.

Houses and property go on the market every day. So what's the big deal?

Well, some onlookers are worried that these newest properties, joining Ackerly Pond Vineyards, Castello di Borghese, Galluccio Family Winery, Schneider Vineyards and other, lesser properties on the market, mean that people are giving up on the region and getting out while they can.

I won't claim to be an expert on real estate and I don't have any inside information per se, but that worry seems unfounded from where I sit. I certainly don't see any of these owners selling their assets at a cut rate just to "get out."

In fact, I know that in the case of Sherwood House and Castello di Borghese, it's a simple matter of moving into a new stage in their lives. When I asked Ms. Smithen about the news, she responded by saying simply, "We want to do more traveling and (as) you know, we" bought a house in Antibes (France). Ten years is a long run and we've fulfilled our dream twenty times over. But we still are continuing business as usual. I want to hand it over to someone who has as much passion as we have. We have met the most incredible people in this industry."

That doesn't sound like someone who is worried about the viability of the region's wine industry, does it?

Similarly, Ann Marie Borghese commented, "Marco and I are following our initial plan, which was to be here until the children graduated high school, and now we are structuring our next phase. The vineyard is for sale and with the time it takes to conclude this type of transaction we are starting the sequence." Neither of their children plan to take over the family business, and they are ready to move on.

The Lieb property for sale is merely the house and the surrounding property (which is covered in vines). Lieb Family Cellars' management has been mum about the whole thing, but it doesn't sound like the wine-making operation, Long Island's only premium crush facility, is for sale or in any danger of closing, just a house that doesn't get used much. Maybe they'll even re-invest the money from the home sale in the wine.

Detractors are also pointing to what Leucadia National Corporation – which bought Broadfields Wine Cellars and Charles John Vineyard and ripped all the vines out last year – is doing. Or, more accurately, not doing. The vines the group had planned on re-planting those fields with have been made available to other growers. It's not clear what their plans are for the future. But, while odd, I don't think anyone should read too much into it. The confusion is compounded some by the fact that Leucadia isn't talking to the press, or anyone else for that matter.

It seems as if human nature is to be negative and worry – always seeing the worst possible outcome. But I see these changes as a good thing and an opportunity. Take lemons and make lemonade they say, right?

These vineyards really are an opportunity for an influx of new passion, talent and, of course, money. It's important in any maturing wine region for new investors to join the fray. So, let's be patient and see these changes for what they are – the normal progression of any industry as it grows and establishes itself.

If I had a few million dollars, I wouldn't hesitate to invest in the industry myself.

Out Of The Cellar And Into The World

New Talent At Bedell/Corey Creek Tackles The Challenges Of A Global Wine Market

By Lenn Thompson

Trent Prezler, chief operating officer of Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards, was hired by owner Michael Lynne, who is also co-chairman and CEO of New Line Cinema, in 2003 to help move his winery forward.

Since then, Prezler has overseen a great many changes at the wineries. John Levenberg, formerly of Paul Hobbs Winery in Napa, has joined the winemaking team. They've added an outdoor tasting pavilion that offers gorgeous vineyard views and have upgraded the winemaking facilities. A new crush pad more than doubles the fruit-receiving area, the barrel room has been expanded with seventy new barrels, and seventeen new custom-made stainless steel tanks with removable lids have been installed in the fermentation room.

What's next for Prezler, Bedell and the region as a whole? Dan's Papers recently caught up with Prezler to find out.

Dan's Papers: What were you doing prior to joining Bedell?

Trent Prezler: I joined the Bedell team after completing my M.S. in Agricultural Economics at Cornell University. At Cornell I spent most of 2002 writing a thesis about consumer acceptance of New York wines in the New York City market. Additionally, a classmate from Cornell's Johnson School of Management worked with me to form a small market research company that was advising John Hancock Financial Group on their global vineyard acquisition strategies.

Dan's: Bordeaux. You hear the comparison between Long Island and Bordeaux all of the time. Why do you think that is?

Prezler: When Long Island viticulture was still in its nascent years – particularly in the 1980s and 1990s – there probably was a tendency to draw reference points to places like Bordeaux as a means of understanding how the climate and soils of Long Island fit within

Trent Prezler, COO of Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyard the regionally segmented scheme of global agriculture. I think those comparisons are less relevant now as Long Island forges its own unique identity among the great regions of the world.

Dan's: Okay. If you had to compare Long Island to any other region, what would be it?

Prezler: At Bedell, we are producing wines which exhibit at once the best characteristics of California with the best of Bordeaux. With our climate and soils on Long Island, we have the unique ability to produce wines showing well-extracted, delicious fruit on the front palate, complemented by food-friendly tannins and structure in the mid-palate. It's the best of both worlds.

Dan's: What are the biggest challenges facing Bedell and Corey Creek right now?

Prezler: This year at Bedell we bottled thirteen wines and nine of them sold out within the first six months of release. This is a direct result of our commitment to quality in the bottle and the fast growth of our wine club and national distribution networks. Since we have no plans to increase production volume, our challenge now is to optimize the management of our wines.

Dan's: In so many places on this planet, restaurants only serve local wines. This is true throughout Europe, California and even the Pacific Northwest. Why isn't the same true, in general, in Manhattan or even Long Island?

Prezler: You almost exactly quoted the opening sentence of my Cornell M.S. thesis! Walk into any restaurant in Napa and you will see almost exclusively California wines on the list. Ditto for French wines while dining al fresco at any bistro in Provence, and ditto for Washington wines in Seattle. One of the most perplexing issues in New York is the resistance we see in the marketplace toward local agricultural products. I'm not sure, but it may have something to do with the fact that New York has such a major convergence of cultures from all around the world, diluting people's affinity for something 'local.' At Bedell, we are working every day to educate New York consumers and key sommeliers to open their eyes to the world-class wines we are crafting right here in their own backyard.

Dan's: You've said before that one of your goals is to get your

Sommelier (continued from page 51)

Chardonnay from California, New Zealand and South Africa labeled that way, too.

Here on Long Island, Channing Daughters is producing a bunch of crisp whites that are quite impressive. They are even garnering high scores from Prof. Parker and his mighty numbers. These are wonderful food wines that are great for pairing with that healthy Mediterranean cuisine that has become so popular. As a result, some of Channing Daughters' wines sell out so fast you have to be on their mailing list in order to assure a purchase. Chris Tracy, the winemaker, is a big fan of the wines of Friuli in northeastern Italy, another great area for food-friendly wines, both reds and whites. Friuli is home to several wonderful white wines, such as the specialty Tocai Friuliano (this will soon be called just Friuliano due to protestations from Hungary), Sauvignon Blanc and Pinot Grigio, all varieties that Tracy works with in Bridgehampton.

The last food friendly wine I will mention also Asparagus: a challenge to wine pairing gets fine results locally as well as in the "Old World." Cabernet Franc produces world-class wines in parts of Bordeaux (notably Château Cheval-Blanc), in the Loire (Chinon), in Friuli and here on the North Fork of Long Island. The Cabernet Franc grape likes a cooler climate and is not as fussy about soil types as some other grapes, such as the finicky Pinot Noir, so Long Island is well suited for it. Cabernet Franc is one of my favorite grapes in that it has the ability to produce serious wines like Cheval-Blanc (notes of tobacco, red and black currants and hint of spice, the palate is deep and concentrated) or more playful wines like those found in the Loire. Loire Cabernet Francs have brighter fruit characters, such as red cherry and red raspberry. Here on Long Island, both styles are made very well. A couple of my local favorites are from Paumonok, Pellegrini, The Old Field and Jamesport.

Christopher Miller is an Advanced Sommelier, Court of Master Sommeliers, and Master Sommelier Candidate. Questions about wine pairing or wine in general may be sent to csml@hamptonswineclub.com.

wines on top lists throughout the world. What has to happen for that goal to be achieved?

Prezler: We have to start at home first and gain broader acceptance among New York City restaurants and retailers. Bedell is making considerable progress in that regard – and I note that other Long Island wineries are too. If I may coin a new phrase, New York is such a “groundforce” in the food and wine industry that success here will lead to success in other major cities.

Dan's: I know that Bedell was involved in some of the pre-planning of the Long Island Merlot Alliance, but Bedell is not a part of the group. Does that mean that Bedell isn't focusing on merlot?

Prezler: Actually, Merlot is a wonderful grape for Long Island and it comprises the largest percentage of our acreage at Bedell. The beauty of Merlot is that unlike longer-maturing varieties, such as Cabernet Sauvignon, you can drink a Merlot just a year or two in bottle and it's going to be deliciously approachable. It will not necessarily require five to ten years in bottle before revealing its charms. Merlot is also a tremendous blending grape and can be particularly exciting when blended with other varietals that grow well on Long Island.

Tasting pavillion at Bedell

Dan's: You mention blending and with your Cupola, Taste line, and now Gallery blends. Bedell seems to have a new focus on blends versus varietal bottlings. Can you tell us a bit about that shift in focus?

Prezler: At Bedell, we believe strongly that blended wines have several major benefits. The process of making blended wines is highly qualitative and even experimental, which allows the full creative talents of our winemaker to be revealed. We grow many different varietals to world-class levels and blends are an outlet for their convergence. Additionally, when you create a blended wine with a particular branded name and particular combination of grapes, you are creating something truly unique which many not have existed before anywhere in the wine world. That is an exciting process to be a part of.

Dan's: Will this change in philosophy carry over to the red wine program? Will we start seeing more red blends?

Prezler: Our blended program really began to take shape with the 2005 vintage and the whites from '05 were released this year. In 2007, we will be releasing Bedell's 2005 reds, which will include Bedell 2005 TASTE Red, a blend of 55-percent Merlot, 25-percent Cabernet Sauvignon, 10-percent Cabernet Franc and 10-percent Syrah. TASTE Red is a wine we are very excited about.

Dan's: Looking beyond Bedell, what are the biggest challenges industry-wide, in your view?

Prezler: I am on the board of MKF Research LLC, the pre-eminent wine think tank based in Napa. In that capacity, I have had many conversations with peers at small farm boutique wineries in California. There are several issues that everybody seems to be concerned about, including national and global consolidation of distributor networks and the rapid emergence of consistently styled, well-marketed wines from the Southern Hemisphere – Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Argentina.

Dan's: Why do you think that Bedell is uniquely positioned to succeed in the world industry?

Prezler: At Bedell, we have made major commitments to quality in the bottle, a state-of-the-art facility and bringing world-class talent to Long Island. The results of our business model are already quite compelling and we believe the future is very bright.

JAMESPORT VINEYARDS

“A Winery to Watch!”*

In the June issue of Robert Parker's Wine Advocate, Jamesport Vineyards was reviewed as a “Winery to watch!”* by David Schildknecht, Mr. Parker's tasting associate.

The Wine Advocate is generally recognized as the most prestigious and powerful wine publication in the world, using a rating system that is known to be used by wineries around the world to help determine pricing, based on tasting notes and scores from this respected and knowledgeable publication.

Here at Jamesport Vineyards, this was an acknowledgement of what we already knew: that finally the quality and price of our wines is as good and fair as any other fine wine growing region in the world. Mr. Parker's review confirms this and certainly adds credibility and legitimacy to our appellation, the North Fork of Long Island, our backyard.

We received some of the following quotes:

Jamesport Vineyards Reserve Merlots {98' and 01'} “Puts one in mind of some serious Right Bank Chateaux”-91 and 89 pts. respectively.

02" Estate Merlot- “This excellent value wine will embarrass most of the merlots in the marketplace, both for price and quality” -88 pts.

02' Melange de Trois- “Don't miss this exceptional value for an affordable opportunity to glimpse the unique potential of L.I. red wine” -90 pts.

05' Sauvignon Blanc- “Represents an excellent value”-88 pts.

04' East End Series Chardonnay- “Vivacious, lip smacking finish of the sort to seldom associated with the C- word” “Good Value” -85 pts.

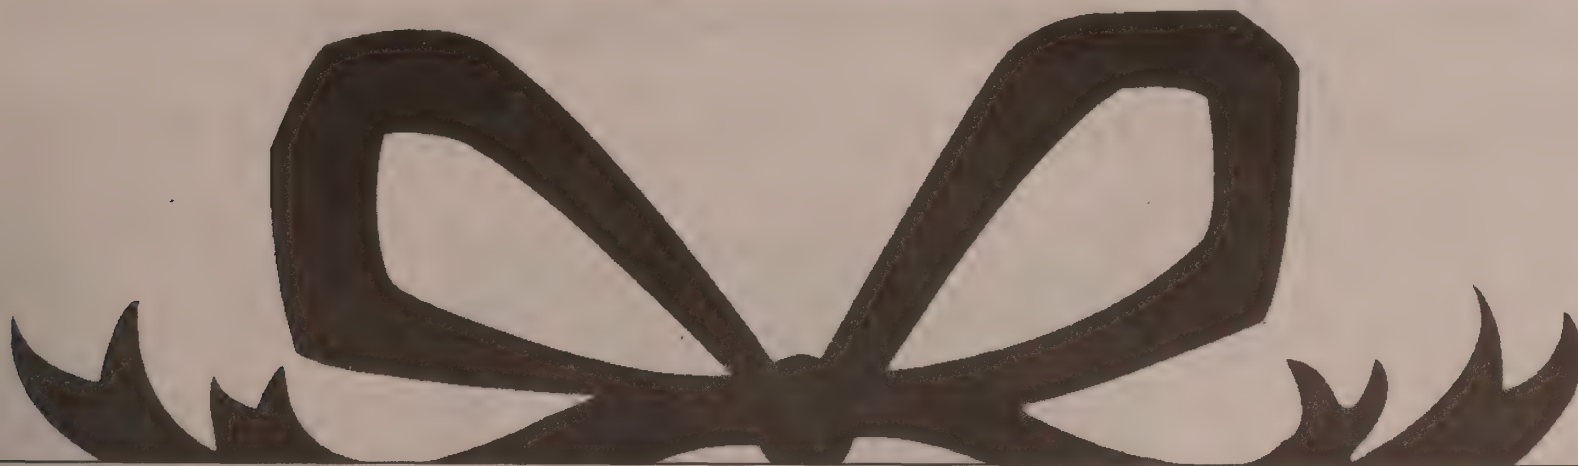

04' Late Harvest Riesling {dessert wine} “Fascinating and delicious, represents an extraordinary value!” -90 pts.

The Wine Advocate finished it's excellent and exciting review of our wines and winery by saying that, “This team may just be hitting its' stride” and, exclusively, “This is a winery to watch!”

The “Team” here at Jamesport Vineyards hopes that all wine lovers will try our wines by visiting us here at the vineyard or purchasing a bottle or two at their favorite fine wine shop or restaurant.

Dan's THROUGH THE GR<sup>PE</sup> VINE

Clovis Point Joins The North Fork Wine World

"We immediately agreed that our winery and tasting room would be oriented to serious wine drinkers like ourselves. We did not want to create a gift shop that also sells wine. We also did not want to build a bar that happens to focus on wine sales." That's how Hal Ginsburg, one of the proprietors of Clovis Point, describes he and his partners' vision for their new wine venture.

In 2001 Ginsburg and two friends of his – Nasrallah Misk and another who is no longer involved in the project – looked at ten acres of property on Main Road in Jamesport and decided to purchase it and turn the farm into a small vineyard with a converted-barn tasting room. Jonathan and Renae Pine and Richard Frey also joined as proprietors and the Clovis Point label was born. They added an existing vineyard on Herrick's Lane in 2002 and the combined vineyards go by the name East End Vineyards.

The name Clovis Point refers to the sculpted tools found near the vineyard and that now adorn the labels. These tools were used by Native Americans on Long Island's North Fork over 10,000 years ago. Now, with vineyard manager Peter Gristina, formerly of Gristina Vineyards (now Galluccio Family Wineries) and currently of Duck Walk Vineyards, tending the vines and John Leo of Premium Wine Group making the wines, Ginsburg and his partners are hoping to open their tasting room this winter.

"When the tasting room will open is essentially out of our hands since it is dependant on town approvals," Ginsburg said.

Partner Hal Ginsburg in the vineyard at Clovis Point

Ginsburg and Misk, who act as managing partners, chose Gristina as vineyard manager both for his experience and because they were "impressed with his obvious knowledge and his willingness and desire to manage a high-end project from the ground up."

The wines are being made at Premium Wine Group, the East Coast's only custom crush facility, where John Leo first came into the picture. Ginsburg says, "beyond finding him an easy person to work with, we found him extremely knowledgeable and committed to making fine wines that focus on the fruit, not simply oak and other 'winemaking tricks.' It was also crucial to us that we have someone who would spend every day with our wine, not just show up from time to time as consulting winemakers often do and just give some directions to the Premium staff. John is at Premium every day and we believe that his ability to taste and pay constant attention to our wines will allow us to make consistently better wines."

"What stands out to me about the fruit of East End Vineyards is the distinctiveness of the chardonnay fruit and the pure fruit qualities of the reds," said Leo, who works with a lot of different North Fork fruit at Premium.

Asked to describe his winemaking style, Leo – thankfully – eschews words like "hands-off" and "non-interventionist," instead saying that he "(tries) to recognize the best potential of the grapes that are harvested, extract that character, minimize the shortcomings, and then blend the different lots of the resulting wines to come up with a drink that is elegant, interesting, balanced and deceptively attractive. I like wine that opens up and out and gets more satisfying with every sip."

To taste three of the new vineyards wines – two 2004 chardonnays (one reared in stainless steel, the other in French oak) and a 2003 merlot – visit www.clovispointwines.com or call 722-4222 to order.

Dan's North Fork

Broadwater Gains Some Yardage

The FERC Says Environmental Impact Will Be Minor, North Forkers Grumble

By David Lion Rattiner

Broadwater just jumped a pretty big hurdle last week.

Just about every politician and citizen on the North Fork has outright opposed the Broadwater project, which is a giant liquid natural gas barge that will be placed into the middle of Long Island Sound. The proposed project is going to bring in gas from China from a giant freighter, which will come into the Sound, link up with another giant freighter in the Sound, give the gas to that freighter and then put the gas into a pipe which will shoot underwater, through the Sound, into New York City. Then you will go home, turn on the lights and bingo, gas is getting burned.

The reason people don't like it so much is because nobody likes the commercialization of the Sound. They also don't like to see a giant oil tanker barreling through while they are at the beach, and they also don't like worrying that it will one day accidentally blow up. With that being said, Broadwater has been going through a lot, and by a lot I mean a lot, of red tape to get approval to make the project happen. Millions of dollars are at stake.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is one of the governing bodies that gives approval for the project. They conducted a study and concluded that a liquefied natural gas platform as big as the Queen

Mary 2 right smack in the middle of the Sound along with other freighters buzzing back and forth is only going to cause minor environmental effects. They will supply about one billion cubic feet per day of natural gas, which will go to New York City, Long Island and Connecticut. That's a lot of gas, which is good, but it's at the cost of the Long Island Sound, which is bad.

Grumble, grumble goes the North Fork.

As far as wetlands, wildlife, fisheries, shellfish and all of the other good stuff, according to the report, will not be affected in comparison to alternatives to the project. Alternatives such as, not doing the project? Obviously not.

The friendly report by the FERC really made the anti-Broadwater Coalition, an organization designed to stop this project, bananas, or in other words, angry. "It's almost as if Broadwater wrote the document for FERC. It is truly disheartening when public concerns are rationalized away in the name of multinational energy corporations," Adrienne Esposito, the leader of the organization, reportedly said.

And so, Broadwater may actually happen. And what does that mean?

Well, we all remember what happened to the nuclear power plant in Wading River. This kind of thing makes North Forkers upset, and in general they don't quit, so we'll just wait and see.

The battle is also not over for North Forkers.

There is one governing body called the New York State Department of State that can throw up the red tape. That's a big call for the agency and everyone is anxiously awaiting to hear what they have to say about the project. Also, the Coast Guard found some safety problems that Broadwater needs to address, like adding marine firefighting capabilities (which actually sounds kind of cool, but also scary).

It will be interesting to see what happens with this. Broadwater is making the bet that they can get the structure up and running by 2010.

Southold Talks To China

33 Southold Students Have Very Long Distance Pen Pals

By Phyllis Lombardi

Once a week, at least. That's how often you'll spot the topic in a newspaper or hear about it on the airwaves. The dangers the Internet poses to young people. It's enough to make parents yearn for the good old days of the crystal set.

Then why in the world is Vic Westgate, a social studies teacher at Southold High School for 30 years and advisor to the school's chapter of the National Honor Society, so delighted that 33 Southold students are spending an increasing amount of time on the computer? What's more – they're sending e-mails to people they've never even met. Does Southold's principal, Mary Fitzpatrick, know about this?

She does indeed. And Ms. Fitzpatrick is all for it. So with both their teacher and their principal offering encouragement, the students are buckling down to some pretty regular correspondence with e-mailers as close as South Dakota, as distant as China.

It's like this. For several years, Vic Westgate (Mr. W.) has facilitated a kind of e-mail pen pal arrangement between students at SHS and high school students in a small Chinese town near Shanghai. Young people in Southold sit at their computers (at home, usually) and e-mail Chinese teens whose teacher is Mr. Roger Teng. The Southold and Chinese students keep records of correspondence, records they share with teachers and classmates. The result is a direct and personal insight into another country and culture. Southold's young people, says Mr. W., are realizing just how much they have, starting with those computers in their homes.

Chinese students, on the other hand, generally have access to a computer only at school. Thus their response to Southold's e-mail is not as rapid as North Fork youngsters would expect.

But when those Chinese students do reply, then the learning, the joy, begins. Seventeen-year-old Meng Dan probably spoke for all the Chinese students when she wrote, "How lucky I am to have a chance to communicate with an American friend." Obviously she's fun loving. She enjoyed hearing about our April Fool's Day traditions and says she can't wait until April 1 to try out some tricks on classmates. Is Meng Dan looking forward to the future? I'd say so. She invited her Southold e-mail friend to the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing!

Then there's Quin Li. She's a 16-year-old volleyball enthusiast who happens to like the Backstreet Boys. She told her Southold pal that Jay Chou is her favorite singer. Southold pal will have to Google that. Similarities and difference. That's what it's all about.

Something quite different this year is the addition of Pine Ridge Indian Reservation to Southold's e-mail address list. The reservation in southwest South Dakota is the second largest reservation in the United States (twice the size of Delaware) and is home to 40,000 Lakota (Sioux). Mr. W. contacted Ms.

Mona Miyasato, an English teacher at Pine Ridge High School, and the e-mail process began.

It was Mona who did the "pairing." She decided which senior at Pine Ridge would e-mail a counterpart at SHS. Mona must be a wise woman – certainly so in the case of Shannon Leonard, a Southold senior. Shannon, when I met her, was pleased with her e-mail pal. Her name is Nonalita and she lives with friends, not family, quite close to Pine Ridge HS.

There are several reasons why Nonalita lives away from home. One is distance. The reservation is huge and transportation, even if available, would be hours to and from school. Another factor that is foreign to us who live comfortable North Fork lives. Winter in South Dakota is cold and most homes on the reservation are poorly heated, if at all. Food is often scarce. School on the reservation is a warm, safe place serving three meals a day. (Yes, you can check out the Pine Ridge HS dinner menu on the Internet.) Thus, students are often drawn to school for reasons other than academics. All this Southold's Shannon Leonard is learning about her friend, her country.

Shannon is a jogger as is Nonalita. And she likes country music. So does Nonalita, who, in her senior year, studies American and Indian literature. Certainly the two young women have much to e-mail about. Nonalita hopes to go to college in Rapid City, South Dakota. Shannon? Well, she has her eyes on college in Texas – and perhaps meeting Nonalita.

But before a Southold student considers travel to China or Pine Ridge, there are months of e-mailing ahead. Months in which North Fork young people will be enriched by things so very different. And yet, as Shannon has discovered, the Lakota have words to bridge the differences.

MITAKUYE OYASIN. We are all related.

The house is expensive. Your mortgage shouldn't be.

No one has to tell you about the price of a house today. Just look in the newspapers or the window of your local realtor. While a lot of people negotiate to get a good bargain on their new home, a surprising number still don't receive the best deal on the mortgage needed to buy that home.

At Hudson City Savings Bank, we're out to change that. We've been in the mortgage business for 130 years and matching you with the best possible mortgage is our specialty. Among our features are:

Competitive Rates and Pricing

Expedited and Convenient Closing Process

90 Day No Charge Lock-in

Leave it to the most efficient bank in America* to offer better values in the form of competitive mortgage rates and lower closing costs. # Quacking Its Way To The North Fork

Duck Walk Vineyards Opens Its Doors To North Forkers

By TJ Clemente

Many visitors come out to the North Fork year round just to visit the wineries and to taste wines before they purchase them. A new opportunity is almost at hand for those who love to sample the wonderful and magnificent Long Island wines. Duck Walk previously only available on the South Fork is in fact coming to Southold on the North Fork very soon.

The new Duck Walk Vineyards tasting room being constructed in Southold is almost completed. The Damianos families, who are a great winemaking family on Long Island, own, operate and supervise the vineyard. Besides Duck Walk, they also own Peconic-based Pindar. Pindar is one of the leading wineries on the North Fork. Duck Walk itself was founded in 1994 by Dr. Herodotus "Dan" Damianos and his son Alexander. They located the tasting room in Water Mill at 231 Montauk Highway. The Classic Normandy Chateau-style building in Water Mill is a well-known and admired landmark on Route 27. The new tasting room on the North Fork will be a roomy 7500 square-foot building consisting of a tasting room and a private tasting room for somewhere between thirty and forty guests. Hopefully it will be open before Christmas. Duck Walk is also going to start producing new wines from the ten acres surrounding the new tasting rooms.

On November 17, Duck Walk hosted an art show at their Water Mill tasting rooms. Art done by John Lennon, Jerry Garcia, Bob Dylan and Jimi Hendrix was sold with some of the proceeds going to the Sunrise Fund at Stony Brook Hospital, an organization to raise awareness about childhood cancer. The event was well attended and the buzz created by the fine wine, great art, and music performed by Terry Winchell and Caroline Doctorow was very uplifting. The event was originally planned to be held in the new North Fork tasting rooms, but due to the attention to detail the Damianos family is so famous for, the Southold facility was not yet ready to host the event.

Duck Walk is hoping to be able to market more of its wine on the North Fork where there is more wine buying traffic due to the higher level of wineries there. Now the famous Duck Walk "Blueberry Port" and "Aphrodite" will be available to North Fork wine shoppers.

With Duck Walk alone, the Damianos family harvests 130 acres and produce more than 25,000 cases of fine Long Island wine. With chardonnay's from 14.95 per bottle to the famous 1998 Cabernet Sauvignon Reserve at $44.95 per bottle, the selection is thorough and interesting. The new released Meritage (fall 2006) is priced at $34.95. Soon all of these well-enjoyed Long Island wines will finally be able to be tasted, evaluated and purchased in the comforts of a new luxurious tasting room right on the North Fork. So pay attention to coming reports of the actual opening celebration party and events at the soon-to-be-opening tasting rooms for the many quality and gold medal winning wines of Duck Walk Winery. The Damianos family love to please customers with unique high standards. Their wine tastings are always educational balanced and well produced. These wine tastings actually account for about 50% of the sales of the 25,000 cases of wine produced by the winery. With the new outlet on the North Fork this number can only go up. Visit www.duckwalk.com or call 631-726-7555.

HOLIDAY GUIDE

Stop-Motion Magic

It's time again you see. Time to watch the specials that are the favorites of you and me. Those stop-motion classics, new and old, are quite something to behold. Characters who sing and play in rhymed loops of loopy delight can even give you quite a fright. But it wouldn't be Christmas, not Christmas at all, if we missed those stop-motion animated classics that follow fall.

As soon as you hear Burl Ives' sonorous voice narrating the story of Rudolph as Sam the Snowman (no relation to Frosty), you know it's Christmastime. Arthur Rankin and Jules Bass are the production team behind some of the best-loved holiday TV specials of the past forty years. Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer (1964) is their best-known and most widely seen work. It is the longest running and highest rated special in television history. The special tells the untold back-story of Rudolph and his friends that you never knew from the famous song, sort of a Behind the Music without the booze and drugs. Although there is a bouncing Bumble and an Island of Misfit Toys, and something makes Rudolph fly. This Christmas you can give actual misfit toys as presents. There is a wide array of models and toys based on the special that you can actually buy. Feel secure in the knowledge that you are saving an abandoned toy.

Less well known is 1970's Santa Claus is Coming to Town which features the voice of Andy Rooney as Kris Kringle, the familiar stop-motion production, and some dated, but nonetheless groovy flower power-era visual touches. Rankin and Bass also produced The Little Drummer Boy in 1968, perhaps the least entertaining of all their work. The 23-minute made-for-TV special retells the fable of the Little Drummer Boy, and is a sign that the Rankin/ Bass production team was pushing the formula too far.

Could VH1 produce a Behind the Claymation special? Drummer Boy is flat and dull compared with the other holiday specials they produced, which most likely accounts for how rarely it's shown. In 1979, Rankin and Bass added Jack Frost to their stop-motion pantheon of Holiday favorites. With the voice of Buddy Hackett, Jack Frost isn't necessarily a Holiday tale, but definitely one for a snowy night.

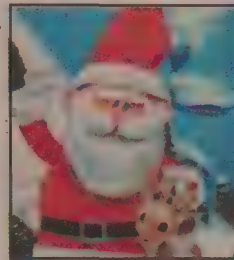

Astute viewers might have caught the Burl Ives' Sam the Snowman-inspired Leon The Snowman (voiced by Leon Redbone, of course) in the recent Will Ferrell vehicle Elf. In the movie, scenes that take place in the North Pole are clearly an inspired homage (or rip-off; whatever you like) to the old Rankin/Bass specials. It's a good choice, because in our collective imaginations that herky-jerky, spray-foam-snow-looking world is what Christmas looks like. Increasingly (almost exclusively, actually) though, filmmakers are turning to digital effects in their animation. Even the old Rankin/ Bass Rudolph was computer-generated in his 2001 comeback special, Rudolph and Island of Misfit Toys (avoid this if at all possible).

Stop-motion animation might soon be a thing of the past. Its history extends back to the very early days of film, when filmmakers first discovered what sort of tricks could be played by making motion pictures one frame at a time. To produce a stop-motion sequence the camera is stopped between each frame, everything on the set that needs to appear to move is adjusted by a tiny increment and the exposure taken. Repeat for a few weeks or months, depending on complexity, and you have yourself a sequence. The process is painstakingly slow and arduous. Studios will not want to spend time and money on an animation process whose look they think can be faked with computer animation. By producing animated characters (horrifyingly, sometimes with the voice of Ray Romano), they will be missing the textured and lavish look that artful stop-motion achieves, as well as the cheeky fun that not-so artful stop-motion provides. Because the articulated figures or models used in stop-motion animation are photographed three-dimensional objects they create a sort of imposed reality that cannot be achieved with any other method.

Stop-motion technique is responsible for everything from the original King Kong's ambling to Jason and the Argonaut's clacking march to the Armies of Darkness in Evil Dead 3. Davey and Goliath and their bizarro world, less Christian (yet non-Mountain Dew pitching) doppelgangers, Wallace and Gromit, are well-known Claymation characters, as is Gumby. Since so few stop-motion productions were around at the time, the low-tech The New Gumby revival show in 1988 actually served as a training ground for many of the animators who worked on Tim Burton's Nightmare Before Christmas. Nightmare could well be the last great stop-motion classic.

Nightmare Before Christmas owes a heavy debt to the old Rankin/ Bass specials that served as its inspiration. In Nightmare, Christmastown has something of the look of Rudolph, with just a little bit of Dr. Caligari thrown in. Hollweentown, on the other hand, is an unadulterated German Expressionist's madness. Jack Skellington and his cohorts'

Christmas exploits might be the pinnacle of the stop-motion art, and serve as a fitting elegy.

To mark its tenth anniversary, Nightmare has been re-released in 3-D, which has made for some stunning visuals becoming all the more eye-popping (though nothing has been done to stop the film from slowing down during a few of the more lackluster musical numbers).

In addition, a special edition soundtrack was released with covers of songs from the movie by the likes of Marilyn Manson, Fiona Apple and She Wants Revenge (whose cover of "Kidnap the Sandy Claws" sounds like every other one of their songs – somehow even the lyrics don't strike you as anything that might not have been on their first album). The film was back in theatres this October and is still playing on select screens in Manhattan (perhaps "When In Manhattan" might cover the more choice venues where the film can be seen this season), but the October release really dredges up an old debate among the film's fans – is it a Halloween movie or a Christmas movie? We'd like to offer a Sykes-Picot-like compromise: Since the movie shares equal elements of both All Hallow's Eve and Christmastime, it falls pretty squarely in the middle. Henceforth Nightmare Before Christmas will be considered a Thanksgiving movie. Trust me, this makes about as much sense as anything in the Sykes-Picot agreement.

HOLIDAY GUIDE

Gobble, Gobble Them Up

Most American families prepare a meal of mammoth proportions on Thanksgiving, and at the center of that meal there is room for only one bird: the turkey. The turkey is one of the only foodstuffs that we know to have been consumed at the very first Thanksgiving meal. While some may be satisfied celebrating the first feast on American soil with a frozen supermarket Butterball, it is becoming increasingly desirable to seek out a more tender option for Thanksgiving dinner. From fresh to free-range, organic to farmed Wild Turkey, and even true Wild Turkeys culled from the woods, the range of options widens each year. However, the Eastern Wild Turkey is perhaps the only game that truly expresses the spirit of the holiday. It was the only breed of turkey eaten by our forefathers, and in the opinion of most people who have tasted one, the only bird fit to be served during the most famous meal of the year.

Wild Turkeys were one of the most welcomed surprises of this "New World" when the first settlers arrived. Benjamin Franklin once wrote that the Wild Turkey would be a more fitting symbol of the United States than the Bald Eagle due to its cunning, resilience, and impressive appearance. They were so prized that by 1973 there were fewer than 1.3 million Wild Turkeys left in Mexico, Canada, and the United States combined. The National Wild Turkey Federations of the United States, Canada and Mexico were founded that year, and they worked together to improve the turkeys' water sources, relocate them to diversify populations, restore their natural woodland habitats, and encourage responsible hunting. Today, more than seven million Wild Turkeys live in North America.

New York State has been ranked as having the fifth-largest density of Wild Turkeys in the country, and Long Island is no exception. Although hunting Wild Turkeys has been banned in Long Island and New York City due to population density, 100,000 New Yorkers participate in Wild Turkey hunting every spring, bringing home up to two turkeys each. Wild Turkeys have always thrived in New York, as the climate and landscape of the state is perfectly suited to Wild Turkeys' needs. Wild Turkeys' natural diet consists of acorns, seeds, berries, and small insects. They prefer to live in wooded areas because, unlike their domestic cousins, Wild Turkeys can fly, and like to roost in trees to avoid predators. They are sleeker, taller and more colorful than domestic turkeys, and can stand over four-feet tall. Their tail-feathers are tipped in white or gold, and their snood – the wobbly dewlap over their beaks – is shorter and droops or bunches up, depending on the turkey's mood. They are notoriously difficult to photograph, hunt, or catch – one Wild Turkey even held up the morning commute to Manhattan last Tuesday, forcing Animal Control officers and construction workers to scramble around the Triborough Bridge for more than fifteen minutes trying to catch her. The size, grandeur and cunning of the Wild Turkey make him a formidable opponent and impressive prize for any hunter.

Those lucky enough to bag one of these tasty turkeys are in for a treat, as Wild Turkeys have proven to be one of the most delicious birds in North America. The Wild Turkey, though smaller-breasted than their plump domestic cousin, is more juicy and tender, with a texture akin to duck, even without a ladling of gravy. They are also much more flavorful, with a range of subtle notes as a result of the wide range of food available to them in their natural habitats. Not all Wild Turkeys taste gamey – gaminess is due to diet, not breed, and farmed Wild Turkeys that are fed the same grain-based diet as domestic turkeys are widely available. Even a wild-caught bird can taste mild, when soaked for 24 hours in two quarts of water, one quart of white wine, two cups of salt and one cup of brown sugar, and still retain their superior texture.

Whether you watch, photograph, hunt or eat them, Wild Turkeys are a symbol of how bountiful North America can be, in spite of a growing human population and spreading urban sprawl. They are raised without antibiotics, and eat a varied natural diet, so they not only taste better than store-bought turkeys – they are actually better for you. Serving a Wild Turkey is perhaps the most fitting way to celebrate our nation and the delicacies that its land produces, while enjoying a healthier, tastier, truly American Thanksgiving meal.

Take Five 2006 with Jan Silver

This is the last "Take Five" for 2006 before I gear up for holiday shopping and then hunker down after the New Year with a load of books I've been wanting to read. Thanksgiving weekend is traditionally a family-and-friends time on the East End, so there are several special performers and children's theater troupes here this weekend. Get a start on holiday shopping at the Parrish Art Museum "Parrish Presents" weekend and the East Hampton Historical Society's Holiday House Tour. Barbara Cook, the undisputed empress and interpreter of the Great American Songbook, performs at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday evening, and contemporary singer/songwriter Loudon Wainwright III is at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Friday night, and the Chuk Fowler trio tonight and Saturday, plus the New Orleans Society Orchestra (jazz) on Sunday at Estia Cantina. "The Picture Show" at Bay Street Theatre screens the original Alien on Friday and the sequel Aliens on Saturday night. If you like to dance, the Sag Harbor's Ladies Village Improvement Society (LVIS) is having a "You Should Be Dancing" party on Saturday at JL East on Montauk Highway, East Hampton. DJs will be spinning popular dance tunes from the 1960s through today's hits. The dancing starts at 8 p.m. and will continue until 12:30 a.m. Admission is a $20 donation at the door – and you'll be helping LVIS projects as well as your physique.

MUSIC

Loudon Wainwright III, the contemporary folksinger/songwriter (and father of Rufus), will perform at Stephen Talkhouse, the cozy club on Main St., Amagansett, on Friday at 8 p.m. ($35). Local favorite rock and rockabilly singer/songwriter Nancy Atlas follows Wainwright at the Talkhouse on Friday. The masterful interpreter of the American popular and theatrical song catalog, Barbara Cook, will sing at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday at 8 p.m. Since her Tony Award-winning performance on Broadway in She Loves Me, Ms. Cook has developed a rich voice, musical sensibility and lyric interpretation that all solo cabaret and concert performers aspire to. Tickets to her program are $85-$120; they can be purchased at the PAC box office after noon (631-288-1500) or online at www.whb-pac.org. Recommended performers at local clubs and restaurants: Amagansett – Stephen Talkhouse (call 631-267-3117 for tickets) – Loudon Wainwright III then Nancy Atlas (Fri.); Estia Cantina – Chuk Fowler jazz trio (Fri. and Sat.), New Orleans Society Orch. (Sun.); Montauk – music weekends at Gurney's Inn; East Hampton – Turtle Crossing (Annie Morgan band Thurs., Mama Lee & friends Fri.), Maidstone Arms (Jane Hastay and Peter Weiss on Fri., jazz and classical guitarist Herb Levine on Sat.); Bridgehampton – pop standards and soft jazz at Kipling's Fri. and Sat.; jazz brunch Sun. at World Pie; Julie Bluestone on Sun. evening and Jody Carlson on Tues. at Pierre's; Southampton – music weekends at 75 Main St. and Tugboats North Sea (Fri.); Hampton Bays – pianist Bruce Dinsmore on Fri. at Edgewater; Westhampton Beach – Annona's (Fri.), music weekends at The Patio, Casa Basso (Sat.); Riverhead – Eastenders Coffee House (Thurs.-Mon.), Tweeds (Fri. and Sat.).

PARRISH PRESENTS

The Parrish Art Museum's "Parrish Presents" is an unusual shopping experience where the merchandise for sale ranges from luxury items to flea market discoveries. It's a great way to start holiday shopping. Volunteers work all year to find unique luxury gifts plus antiques and designer clothing. The weekend starts Friday, 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., with a cocktail party and preview of all the merchandise for sale. The Museum's shop also invites several well-known authors with new books to sign for gift-giving. Tickets to the benefit preview party start at $125 for Museum members and $150 for non-members (call 631-283-2118 or online at www.parrishart.org). On Saturday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., admission to the specialty merchants' booths and flea market is open to all – $5 per person (free for children 18 and under). Luxury items for sale include Oriental and European carpets, fine jewelry, decorative holiday items and antiques. The flea market has some unique home furnishings and accessories, books, china, crystal, jewelry, silver and designer clothing. There is also a silent auction of luxury items – and the bidding closes at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The Museum is on Jobs Lane, Southampton, with parking available in the large lot behind the Museum and Main St.

FILMS, SPEAKERS, HOUSE TOUR

continues its screening of film classics. This weekend, it's the original Alien (1976) directed by Ridley Scott, starring Sigourney Weaver and Tom Skerritt, on Friday at 8 p.m. On Saturday at 8 p.m., the sequel Aliens (1986), directed by James Cameron with Sigourney Weaver and Paul Reiser will be shown. Admission is $5 and tickets are sold half an hour before screening time. Professor Leonard Barkan will read from his new book Satyr Square: A Year, A Life in Rome on Saturday, November 25, 6 p.m. at Canio's Books, Upper Main St., Sag Harbor (no admission charge). The East Hampton Historical Society has a tour of six architecturally significant homes this Saturday, including Lasata, the former Bouvier family estate. The self-guided tour goes on 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., rain or shine. There is a benefit party Friday evening for patrons, sponsors and benefactors. House tour tickets are $50 and benefit tickets for the tour and party start at $150. For tickets, call the EHHS at (631) 324-6850.

FAMILY THEATER

A Garfield Christmas is the musical adventure show at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Friday at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Join in the mischief with the fat cat Garfield and his companions Jon and Odie. Orchestra tickets are $45 adults, $20 children and balcony tickets are $40 adults, $15 children; call PAC afternoon at (631) 288-1500 or go online to whbpac.org. Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, brings in Theatreworks USA on Friday for two performances of If You Give A Mouse A Cookie, a musical revue of several beloved children's stories. On Saturday, Artspower's children's theater production of Harry the Dirty Dog is onstage. This is a musical dramatization based on a classic children's book. Performances both days are at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.; all tickets are $10 at the door. These shows are part of the "Kidstreet" series (www.baystreet.org). Guild Hall, East Hampton, has not forgotten the children for Thanksgiving weekend. On Saturday, Manhattan's Paper Bag Players perform Dandelion, a musical comedy revue. Because Guild Hall's John Drew Theater is undergoing renovation, this show will be presented at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. at the Ross School, off Rte. 114 at Goodfriend Drive, East Hampton. Tickets are $13-$15 and are sold online at www.guildhall.org, or at theatremania.com, or by calling (866)-811-4111.

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO FUN IN THE HAMPTONS

Barbara Cook At WHBPAC

Singing sensation Barbara Cook will return for the third time to the stage of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center this Saturday night, November 25, over the big Thanksgiving Weekend. She is one of the world's few singers who is still belting out Broadway and other tunes after a 55-year career which has taken her around the world. In her illustrious career, she has sung on the world's top stages, from the New York Metropolitan Opera, to Avery Fisher Hall, to Carnegie Hall, to the New York Café Carlyle, to the Royal Albert Hall and other stages in London, to many stages in Australia.

"We are so thrilled to have Barbara Cook come once more to our village," said Joanna Ferraro-Levy, Associate Director of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, a passionate fan of Cook's, who has seen her perform at this center in 2000, 2002, and 2005. "She is my favorite entertainer, and I also saw her sing at the New York Metropolitan Opera over last winter. I would strongly urge anyone who has never seen one of her performances to come to our theater for this great opportunity. Barbara Cook is divine – when she opens her mouth, everything else fades away."

Cook was born in 1927 in Atlanta, Georgia, and made her professional debut in 1950 at the "Blue Angel" in New York City. The following year, she made her Broadway debut as the ingénue lead in the musical, Flahooley. She followed with several more Broadway performances, notable as Ado Annie in the City Center revival of Oklahoma!, and in 1954, as Carrie Pipperidge in Rodgers and Hammerstein's Carousel. In 1955, she also starred as Hilda Miller in Plain and Fancy, which was her first real Broadway success, and for which she got the Theater World Award. Cook's radiant stage persona and her equally radiant soprano voice, began earning her a reputation as one of the foremost rising stars during the "golden age" of the American Broadway musicals of the 1940s through the 1960s.

She created the role of Cunegonde in the original production of Leonard Bernstein's Candide in 1956. Cook went on to star in two classic roles, as Marian the Librarian in The Music Man (which earned her a Tony Award), and as Amalia in the noted musical, She Loves Me, in 1963. Cook played other significant roles in such leading Broadway shows as The King and I, The Gay Life, The Grass Harp, and also in Showboat. She also played on the dramatic stage in the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center's Enemies.

Throughout this time, Cook also actively appeared on television and was a frequent guest on such shows as Toast of the Town, The Bell Telephone Hour, and Producer's Showcase. She also had non-singing roles in the popular Alfred Hitchcock Presents and The Kraft Television Theatre.

In 1974, Cook began a creative partnership with musical arranger, accompanist, composer, conductor, and dance arranger Wally Harper, which lasted for almost 31 years, until his untimely death in 2004. During their unique collaboration, Cook re-emerged in a new role as concert singer supreme. Under Harper's brilliant musical direction, Cook took the cabaret and concert world by storm, becoming one of the most sought-after vocalists worldwide. Together, this team released a live recording of Cook's legendary 1975 Carnegie Hall debut called

Barbara Cook at Carnegie Hall. Cook and Harper traveled the world together, from New York to Australia, performing several times at the White House, for such presidents as Carter, Reagan, Clinton, and Bush.

In September of 1985, Cook appeared with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra as "Sally" in Stephen Sondheim's Follies. She also recorded The Disney Album for the MCA record label, and she recorded Carousel by Rodgers and Hammerstein. She also helped to make aware and promote her two causes, AIDS research and the advancement of the performing arts, during her performance at the Carnegie Hall Gala, Music and Remembrance, in October of 1991. She was also one of the only American artists chosen to perform at the Sydney 2000 Olympic Arts Festival in the Sydney Opera House.

Throughout her illustrious singing career, this lilt-ing soprano has recorded eight original cast albums, two Ben Bagley albums of songs by Jerome Kern and George Gershwin, and an album called, Songs of Perfect Propriety, featuring poems by Dorothy Parker. Cook has also appeared as the voice of "Thumbelina's mother," in the animated film Thumbelina, by Warner Brothers. Some of her more recent DRG recordings include "Barbara Cook; Live From London," "All I Ask of You," and "Count Your Blessings," a collection of Christmas songs which was nominated for a Grammy.

There is also Barbara Cook-Tribute, Barbara Cook: Songs From the Heart, Barbara Cook's Broadway, and Barbara Cook: Mostly Sondheim.

In recent years, in addition to her busy concert touring and recording schedule, Cook has become a highly respected music teacher who is in great demand for her Master Classes. She constantly shares her many ideas and her musical philosophy with audiences around the world, where she describes her lengthy career as a "work in progress." Cook has been described as "enthusiastic" and "passionate" about her work, which she tries to share in motivating younger students. In her teaching, she tries to help each student find his or her "essence" and to communicate this to the audience.

Over her more than 50 years spent performing around the world, Cook has accumulated millions of devoted fans. One of these, Joanna Ferraro-Levy, said she hopes more people will take this opportunity to come to see her sing this Saturday night. "This is a woman who has performed on all the major stages in the world, so we're really honored to have her here in Westhampton Beach," she said. "When she sings, magic happens, and it's about as good as it gets." For tickets and more information, call the WBPAC box office at (631) 288-1500.

MINI - MOVIE REVIEWS

Bobby

Emilio Estevez takes the helm for this star-studded biopic of Robert F. Kennedy. Like so many actors-turned-directors (see Kevin Costner, Clint Eastwood), Estevez has a well-intentioned but heavy hand that makes the whole thing feel like an over-cooked school project. That said, the star spotting alone makes for an entertaining two hours.

Déjà Vu

After the flop that was Domino, it's good to see Tony Scott back in fighting form with this futuristic action-adventure which sees an agent travel back in time to save a woman from murder, and falling in love in the process. The atmosphere is impeccably sleek and metallic while Denzel Washington and Val Kilmer provide sturdy leads.

Deck the Halls

Danny De Vito and Matthew Broderick star as neighbors at war when each tries to outdo the other with Christmas decorations. Given the rank confections that studios spew out during the festive season, this is pretty inoffensive and at times very entertaining. Arrested Development's excellent Alia Shawkat provides great support.

Tenacious D: The Pick of Destiny

Jack Black's comedy rock band has its first headlining outing in this film from Liam Lynch, the director of the excellent Sarah Silverman: Jesus is Magic. Two goons unite to form a band and then go on a quest to steal a sacred guitar pick. If you're a fan of Black's comedy then this will be manna to you. If not, it's just a fat guy wobbling his way through some cheap gags.

Casino Royale

There's been widespread and cruel consternation over the casting of Daniel Craig as the classic British spy, so it's pleasing to see him succeed spectacularly on his first outing. His is a grittier, but nonetheless glamorous James Bond, and the chases, the fights and the flirtations are very much on form. Eva Green (The Dreamers) makes a refreshingly bright love interest and Mads Mikkelsen (of the astonishing After the Wedding) is delightfully villainous.

For Your Consideration

Christopher Guest returns with another behind-the-scenes ensemble comedy, this time turning his attention to awards season in the film industry. This might not be quite as consistently sharp as Best in Show but there's plenty to amuse here from a phenomenally diverse cast. Ricky Gervais and Catherine O'Hara stand out as does Jennifer Coolidge, an actress always at the top of her game.

Happy Feet

Now CGI may well be the bane of any summer but it's been a couple of weeks now and this is almost adorable. A tale of singing and dancing penguins – need I say more? The animation is seamless and the story of a young penguin (voiced by Robin Williams) finding himself in a world that is sweet without being saccharine. Great voices are provided by Hugo Weaving, Miriam Margolyes, Nicole Kidman and the late Steve Irwin.

The Return

Sarah Michelle Gellar is unusually engaging here as saleswoman Joanna Mills, haunted by vivid nightmares of the murder of an unknown young woman. Heading to the dead girl's hometown, Joanna's life begins to unravel and she finds herself becoming the next target. Sharp, claustrophobic and creepy, it's a shame that this comes just too late for Halloween – it deserves an audience.

A Good Year

For someone who takes himself so seriously, Russell

Crowe seems to have made an odd choice with this, his only film release of the year. A twee and grating story of an Englishman played by Crowe, who inherits a vineyard in France. Over the course of the film he finds love, acceptance and the true and natural pleasure of rural life. I found myself feeling nauseous.

Stranger Than Fiction

A peculiar meta-fiction from the director of Monster's Ball, this sees Will Ferrell playing an IRS auditor who suddenly discovers he is a character in a novel. His attempts to change his fate are odd and endearing and it's a pleasure to see Ferrell leave behind the gurning and hijinks to play a sweetly affecting Willy Loman-type. Fabulous support is provided by Dustin Hoffman, Maggie Gyllenhaal, and the ever-lovely Emma Thompson.

Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan

Sacha Baron Cohen (of "Ali G" fame) returns with arguably his most broadly offensive satirical tool: Borat, a Kazakhstani talking head on report in the US. This is vicious and impressive comedy, allowing room for belly laughs as well as the more uncomfortable humor which comes from Cohen's skewering of the most absurd aspect of America.

Flushed Away

Just when you thought it was safe to go back in the cinema, after a summer awash with talking bears and dancing cows, bam! The return of CGI, just in time for Christmas. This actually isn't that bad fare, coming from the Aardman studios (those responsible for Wallace and Gromit etc.) and telling the story of a posh house mouse (voiced by Hugh Jackman) who finds himself flushed into the sewers.

GARBO TALKS

Sidney Lumet directs other celeb Hamptonites in a charming, poignant story. A dutiful son desperately tries to fulfill his mother's last wish to meet Greta Garbo. Anne Bancroft as the tough mom is so great! Their meeting in the closing scene features the fab Betty Comden as Garbo. Darn, I gave away the ending.

SOMETHING'S GOTTA GIVE

Diane Keaton proves an "older" woman still has "it" while Jack Nicholson suffers a heart attack wooing her daughter. Jack's young doctor, Keanu Reeves, goes ga-ga over Diane. It's a very youthful take on the A.A.R.P. crowd, in the fountain of youth's Hamptons.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

All right, boys, adjust your athletic, arch and fan club supporters for this year's Oscar race because the girls are running rings around you with their spectacular performances. Though it's early for Award night, the world-class, leading ladies have legs for long-term distance, that is. With empiric stamina, Helen Mirren could reign for her jewel-like performance in The Queen. Exuberantly dashing Cate Blanchett has two other fine films this season besides the powerful Babel that could make bookends with the Oscar she won for The Aviator. And watch out for Kate Winslet – with all that muscle in Little Children, she could bust out this year. A dark heroine coming from behind, Penelope Cruz, more mature after her absence and back at home with her important primary director, Pedro Almodóvar, starring in his Volver (Return). It is quite a marvelous turn for, and by, her.

Sr. Almodóvar is known by many as the owner-creator of a world whose deities of exalted, powerful women dwell supremely in classic melodramatic travail, steeped in a heavenly saturation of humanity. When Almodóvar works in this genre, his cast does not usually accommodate the men very much, but, ah the Women! This director-writer gives his female characters such a richly diverse dominion in which to breathe, live and express themselves, they bloom fabulously in spite of ghosts, incest, rape and murder: this happens because he supports it all with lively laughter. Almodóvar's fertile land gives his women volatile capabilities. The film's six actresses all shared the acting award at Cannes. I can hear you Mr. Machos sniggering in your thick neck. Go ahead, but see Volver and you will laugh your head off of that stubby neck, and the wispy and jarring adventures of the women will haunt your midnight-til-four a.m. sleepless hours more vividly than that Playboy centerfold.

The women's community in Volver is not completely unrelated to Almodóvar's Women On The Verge Of A Nervous Breakdown (1988) and All About My Mother (1999). In Volver, the women represent those who assisted his growing up. You can feel their existence, just as Ms. Cruz's Raimunda does while walking with her mother's ghost. Raimunda and her sister have come to La Mancha, Almodóvar's birthplace, where their parents are buried. Ms. Cruz's ghostly mother is portrayed by the unique Carmen Maura, an actress from the director's earlier films. She is able to give all the horrors and tragedy by doing a warm feeling, sly fun, and eerie bizarreness. Cruz's sister, Sole, is played by Lola Duenas. The old aunt, Tia Paula, is played by the Chus Lampreave and the troubled neighbor, Augustina, is played by the wonderful, sorrow-laden Blanca Portillo. Again, we can repeat the sorrows and woes depicted in this straight-line narrative-cancer, parental treachery, deathly horror and so on, but it all adds up to a colorful, upbeat, spiritually consoling product.

And, there is the voluptuous Oscar buzzing performance by Penelope Cruz and, Yohanna Cobo as her young daughter – a perfect foil. What Cruz's Raimunda has to deal with may seem beyond belief, but how well do you know those folks in Spain? To start with, when someone notices blood on Raimundo's neck, she casually suggests, "It's only 'women's troubles.'" Actually, it's only her husband's blood. The rotten guy had got a kitchen knife in his stomach and so promptly stuffed his body into the freezer of the restaurant where she works. What's so odd? Did her daughter...? Enough said. Raimunda's problems are enormous, but she has too many other people's tribulations on her mind to care. Misery is not her thing. She is too busy living her life, and the lives of others, in the spirit of sisterhood, a bygone given that bonded women in friendship. Even her deceased mother hides under the bed until she is needed and then appears much to the dismay of Raimunda's sister, who quickly recovers and gets Mama to help run an illegal hair salon in the living room. This shows how far Almodóvar's women have come since they teetered – On The Verge Of A Nervous Breakdown.

Compare Volver, if you like, to Hispanic histrionic novellas or Hollywood hankie-soakers, however, the film is in a totally different class. There is no Girl Scout campiness here. What is incredulous is made wise, and human emotion that shimmers artificiality into a totally new reality. Once you sense it, you know you've crossed the threshold of the director's universe.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at Major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. Sarah Halsey assists him.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

After the Thanksgiving feast, are you comforted by visions of delicious leftovers, or do you deny their presence? Love them or loathe them, Thanksgiving leftovers are here to stay - and I for one, love it.

It's important to make sure that leftover turkey meat is carefully stored in your refrigerator. Carve all the meat off the carcass and refrigerate the extras as promptly as possible and in a suitable container. The less air that gets into any container or wrapping, the longer the meat will stay fresh. And don't throw the bones away - the carcass, combined with a carrot, a rib of celery or two and a couple of parsley sprigs, along with a couple of cloves, peppercorns and a bay leaf or two are the beginnings of a fine broth to use in a soup or stew.

One of my favorite ways to use up several Turkey Day trimmings is to pile slices of cooked turkey with cranberry relish, onion-mushroom herb stuffing, red onion slices and a smear of mayonnaise into a hollowed-out crusty loaf. Weight down the sandwich in the refrigerator and slice into portions for serving. It will make a great lunch, paired with a tossed green salad the next day!

For an Asian twist, fried rice is a great way to incorporate leftover turkey with cooked rice, some chopped garlic and ginger, and any leftover vegetables you may have lying around, such as cooked broccoli and snow peas. Add some water chestnuts, a generous splash of soy sauce and a dash of dark sesame oil and you've created a tasty way to clean out the fridge. How thankful we are - even for Turkey Day excesses!

ROAST TURKEY, STUFFING AND CRANBERRY SANDWICH

For delicious leftover pickings, assemble a sandwich with turkey trimmings.

Serves 4-6

1 round loaf of crusty Italian or French baguette
5-6 tablespoons light mayonnaise
1 1/2 cups old-fashioned turkey stuffing
1 cup cranberry sauce
3/4-1 pound turkey slices
1 medium red onion, thinly sliced
Salad greens, vinegar and oil for a simple salad (optional)

1. Whichever bread you use, halve the bread horizontally. Hollow out the bread, leaving a 1/2 inch thick shell.

2. Thinly spread both sides with mayonnaise then spread a generous layer of stuffing on one half of the bread. Spread cranberry sauce over the stuffing then layer turkey slices and onion on top of that. Place the remaining bread half over the top.

3. Cover bread with plastic wrap and weight down with a heavy object (such as a coffee can) in refrigerator for an hour or two. When ready to serve, slice into portions and bring to room temperature. Garnish each plate with fresh salad greens, dressed lightly with vinegar and extra-virgin olive oil, if desired.

ASIAN TURKEY FRIED RICE

Fried rice is indeed a flexible dish. It can be prepared with almost any solid leftovers. Just be sure to use day-old cooked rice, which works best.

Serves 4-5

3 tablespoons peanut or canola oil
2 eggs, beaten
1 bunch whole scallions, thinly sliced
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespoon freshly grated ginger
4 cups cold, cooked long-grain or basmati rice
1 cup cooked broccoli florets
1/2 cup julienne of snow peas
1/2 cup coarsely chopped water chestnuts
2 cups cooked turkey slices
1-2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
3-4 tablespoons light soy sauce
1 teaspoon dark sesame oil

Note: Place all the ingredients on a prep tray or platter, arranging them side by side. The actual cooking will then go swiftly and carefully - that's what Chinese stir-fry is all about.

1. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a medium-sized wok or large skillet. Stir fry eggs in the oil, chopping them coarsely with a spatula or side of large spoon. Dish out to a side plate.

2. Heat remaining 2 tablespoons oil in the same skillet or wok and add scallions, garlic and ginger. Stir-fry about 2-3 minutes, until a bit limp, then add the rice, breaking up any lumps with a spatula. Add broccoli, snow peas, water chestnuts, turkey slices and seasonings, turning and mixing with 2 spatulas or large spoons over medium heat until contents are well mixed and heated through. If at any time the mixture sticks to the pan, tilt pan and add a bit more oil to side of pan. Taste to adjust seasoning as necessary and serve hot.

Dining in the Hamptons

Chic, sexy and absolutely delicious are the words that came to mind when I dined at Trata East in Water Mill. Trata's combination of style, comfort and true hospitality has put this restaurant on the Hamptons map, and it is here to stay.

Everything just works at Trata. The lighting, the design, the staff, and, of course, the remarkable food, all set the restaurant apart from others. The open kitchen where you can watch flames fly as chefs work the orders, fresh fish on display at the entrance, and an international staff that has intimate knowledge of the food make this restaurant charming, sleek and unique.

Executive Chef Athanasios Papoutsis really puts on a show with his extensive, creative and interesting menu which, in addition to the wonderful, art deco design, is the best part Trata offers, with a menu that is remarkably complete, filled with fresh fish and meats, and imported, extra-virgin olive oil that is made in Greece by the owner's family, all served along with seasonal vegetables and accompaniments. Trata stays true to its Mediterranean roots, so a diner that looks for both healthy items as well as rich, delicious dishes will find it easy to eat here. Nothing is cooked with oils that carry trans-fats, and everything is prepared in ways that bring out the natural flavors of all the foods while at the same time keeping a health-conscious eye.

We started our appetizers with some Octapodi, a signature dish at Trata that consists of fresh grilled Mediterranean octopus, onion, capers, peppers, olive oil and wine vinegar. The aroma alone from this dish is worth the order. True grilled flavor mixed with olive oil is tough to beat. I was glad that Sharif, our waiter, who hails from Egypt, had recommended it. We also had the Kavourokfte, which was a wonderful Maryland jumbo lump crab cake which was truly a unique dish because of the grilled apples served with it. They burst with flavor. Other menu items I logged into my mind for my next trip to Trata were the fresh grilled sea scallops on a rosemary skewer with fresh herbs and bean salad, as well as the pan-fried feta with sesame seed crust, cherry tomatoes, kalamata olives and figs.

Trata is unique in the Hamptons in many ways, such as the open kitchen, their dedication to cooking with olive oil and their extensive menu. But what truly separates Trata is their offerings of fresh, whole fish selections for entrées that are on an ice display when you walk into the restaurant. The fish are flown in daily. Larger fish are shared between two people, and are priced by the pound. The fish at Trata comes from all over the world. You can get Artic Char from Alaska, Dover Sole from Holland, Tiger Shrimp from Africa, Karavides from Scotland and Lavraki from Hellas. When you look at all of the different fish from the different countries you can't help but appreciate being in such a luxurious establishment, and admire the effort and care that has gone into creating it.

We ordered the Red Fagri from Hellas, a rich, flavorful and sweet fish that is from the Snapper family. It was freshly grilled, de-boned, and cooked with olive oil and fresh lemon. What's wonderful about Trata is that they focus on bringing out the true flavors of delicious food: they don't try to decorate it. We shared the fish together with a grilled Greek vegetable platter that left us feeling satisfied and healthy. I would order this dish again and highly recommend it.

At Trata, you can, of course, get other dishes, such as the King Salmon for $32 or the lobster pasta for $32. But if it is your first time at Trata, you should experience a whole fish for the unique dining experience.

For dessert we enjoyed Sokolata, which is a warm double-chocolate torte with Ouzo crème anglaise and seasonal berry coulis, along with some wonderful cinnamon ice cream. That, along with a cappuccino and a glass of Greek Port, sent us to culinary heaven.

Trata is a wonderful restaurant. I urge you to go.

Trata is located at 1020 Montauk Highway, in Water Mill. Reservations 631-726-6200. Open year round.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"OUR TOWN TODAY" AT GUILD HALL

Last week's column sung the virtues of "packaging" an art exhibit, notably the one at the Salomon Gallery featuring Rima Mardoyan. The point is — context is everything in determining success.

Well, not always.

The current display at Guild Hall is all about context: a series of photographs showing East Hampton life during the 1930s and 40s (by Fritz Leddy) and in the present (by contemporary photographers). Leddy's pictures are archival works of historical interest. As documentation, they are salient. (By documentation, we mean there's very little manipulation in terms of composition, angle, lighting, and color: What you see is what was there.)

We're not so sure if the contemporary pictures could be called documentation. In fact, it's difficult to figure out their purpose. Are they fine art, where formal aesthetic qualities are most important, social commentary or archival material? The answer: they are some of these and none of these.

One thing is certain to this critic, however. The contemporary works are not perceived as pure documentation like Leddy's collection. Consider Richard Avedon's 1997 portrait of Josh Gladstone, featuring an off-centered, surreal composition.

"The Sky is Falling IV, 2006," by Ann Chawtsky

There are exceptions, of course, where documentation is closer at hand: Fred McDarragh's "East Hampton Artists," 1975 (a group photo in front of Guild Hall); Ken Robbins' "Main Street."

Which all goes to prove that perhaps the exhibition's context is unclear, needing an edgy refocus.

Does this lack of a sharp focus suggest that some works are boring? Or ineffective? Or not up to par, given the wonderful reputation of each of the photographers? Not at all. What it suggests instead is that the contemporary photos are lacking in meaning, where their aesthetics and/or sociology are compromised.

Would it have been better, perhaps, to juxtapose, side-by-side, a photo from the past with its complement in the present? For example, put Tom Steel's "Gas Pumps at Springs General Store" (2002) with a photograph of the same subject from the past (providing there was one available)? Or Ann Chawtsky's white metal fence alongside another fence from the 1930s, one that was not as cold and sterile, but rather welcoming and thus, a potent, edgy social comment?

Other examples come to mind: a graveyard from the 1940s juxtaposed with Gerry Giliberti's "Fog," a particularly atmospheric graveyard image; visuals of fireworks from the past along with Michael Knigin's "Boys Harbor XV."

Perhaps all these comments only prove that you're truly has a secret desire to become a curator. That desire would probably last only one day, however. Curating is tough going and a cherished profession, suitable for very, very few.

"Our Town Today" will be on view at East Hampton's Guild Hall until Jan. 7.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Adam Smith

The week's cover artist, Adam Smith, is a testament to tenaciousness, considering that he has stuck with his job as a graphic artist all these years while still pursuing his own creative endeavors. We talked to Mr. Smith about this process and his plans for the future.

Q: The pumpkin patch cover is not only indigenous to this area, particularly the North Fork, but also indicative of your own life.

A: Yes, although I live in Selden now, I grew up here in Long Island, in Port Jefferson where my family was really into boating. Even though I studied art at Syracuse University, I still settled in this area, working in Westhampton and now at Searles Graphic in Yaphank for the last seven years.

Q: How did Syracuse prepare you for the art profession?

A: I majored in illustration, but I had a well-rounded education in the visual arts too. I began to think I could actually make money at art. My training enabled me to get a full-time job in graphic design. I'm lucky because nowadays it's hard; a lot of illustrations are stock drawings.

Q: But despite your fortunate situation, you still have another desire?

A: Yes. Inside, I want to be a classical painter and show in galleries.

Q: Are there any particular artists who have influenced this classical objective?

A: Yes, The Hudson River paintings, their vast landscapes, the lighting. Also in the 1970s, the work of Richard Estes. I saw his work as a kid, and he was a big influence, his intricacy. People think his paintings are photographs if they don't look at them closely.

Q: I can see why you respect Estes. He's also a Photo Realist like you. I bet the same thing happens when people see your work.

A: Yes, I want to capture things in the landscape that people may not notice. I did a beach scene where I painted the rocks in the water that you wouldn't see in a photograph. The waves rolling in, the sun sparkling on the rocks. I want people to stop, notice and imagine they are walking into the painting.

Q: That's a tall order. How do you do it?

A: It takes a lot of patience. I have tried to paint a little looser, but the technical precision always works itself in there.

Q: Always in the back of your mind, however, you're thinking about the future, I would imagine.

A: Yes, hopefully, I'll be doing commissions and have my work represented in galleries. I may possibly have my own gallery someday. Right now, our four-month-old baby girl keeps my wife and me busy.

Q: Do you think your attitude toward your art will change as the years go by?

A: Definitely. It will be my own art. People can take it or leave it. Buy it or not. The important thing is that it's what I love to do.

Sandscapes

What is creativity? This question is not easy to answer. For years, Manhattanites, artists, and writers have come out to the East End to find the space, time and light to create. It's hard to say where and when we find inspiration to develop new ideas, concepts, and points of view. Even more interesting is the process that occurs when we attempt to make something new. The ancient Greeks believed that the nine daughters of Zeus and Mnemosyne, who were each given providence over various aspects of the arts, inspired select humans to create art and that these muses were the source of all inspiration. But did they ever take a look at the beaches out here? I don't think so.

The beach, the ocean, the bay, the sound, the harbor and the lake are all great sources of inspiration to many artists in the Hamptons. In fact, the beach lends itself so well to creative work that some artists have not just used the pristine atmosphere of the beach for inspiration, but have actually manifested the beach in their work as a canvas, tool or medium.

Robert Smithson is most well-known for his provocative earthwork, or beach-work, called "Spiral Jetty," a 1500-foot-long, 15-foot-wide, counterclockwise coil that juts from the shore of the Great Salt Lake in Utah. Smithson composed this artwork of basalt rocks and earth in 1970, on the Lake's northeastern shore. In creating this artwork, Smithson's goal was to be able to place the work in the land rather than on top of it. At the time of "Spiral Jetty's" construction, the water level of the lake was unusually low because of a drought. Within a few years, the water level returned to normal and submerged the piece for three decades. The jetty re-emerged in 1999, and was completely exposed. Originally, "Spiral Jetty's" black rock contrasted by muddy water, but due to salt encrustation, its second incarnation appeared to be near-white juxtaposed against pinkish water. During the spring of 2005, the lake level rose once again, due to a near-record-setting snowfall in the mountains, and the work was partially submerged.

"Spiral Jetty," by Robert Smithson

"Spiral Jetty" was the first modern earthwork that made people start to think of different ways to create art using beaches and the land that surrounds them. One of these artists, Jim Denevan, makes "sand swirls" on the beaches of Northern California. The design takes hours to create with many-thousand sweeps of a rake, and is considered a temporary sculpture, as the design only exists for a few hours until the tide comes in and erases it entirely.

Art inspired by the beach surrounds us – if we take a moment to look around. Adults and children alike enjoy making sand art by layering different colors of sand on top of one another inside a bottle of their choosing. Some even take sand from the beach to create scenes by sprinkling sand on top of designs made from liquid adhesives, such as school glue.

Shells can also serve as a great beach-medium, and can be used to make simple jewelry, such as necklaces and bracelets. Shells can also be used for decoration when displayed in large glass jars, on coffee tables or on shelves. People also use shells to decorate on picture frames and other found objects. The beach appears not only as decoration or on a monumental scale, like the work of the two aforementioned artists, it can also manifest itself in paintings. When using watercolors, one can paint a background, and then throw salt onto the paper to make interesting designs. Dune grass can also be used as a brush or medium to create different angles and brush strokes. Whether you are going to Saggs Main Beach with a rake in hand, or collecting odd-shaped shells while walking along Main Beach in East Hampton, let the beach inspire you. Be creative and try something new. After all, she is your muse.

When In Manhattan...BY OLIVER PETERSON

Black Friday

Thanksgiving is over and now the true holiday season begins. The month between Turkey Day and Christmas is usually marked by a panicked buying frenzy. We wake up on Friday, nursing a turkey and wine hangover, when it dawns on us – the mother of all holidays is around the corner and there's nothing to wrap. It's at this moment that we dodge our lingering relatives and head out for our first day of shopping. Unfortunately, everyone is in the same predicament. The stores are packed. The lines are long. Hot items are always in short supply. This is the madness called Black Friday. We get a bit of it here on the East End, especially in the Bridgehampton Commons, but to really participate in the biggest shopping day of the year you should go to Manhattan. Exactly why you would want to subject yourself to the mobs and attitudes reflective of the summer in East Hampton is beyond me, but it's an experience, I suppose.

New York City is the East Coast's and maybe the national and even international center of commerce. Manhattan has something for everyone. One can tailor his or her day of shopping from the quirky and off the beaten path, to the major chains like Best Buy and Toys "R" Us. A man who was camped outside a Putnam, Connecticut Wal-Mart for a chance to get one of the first of the new Playstation 3 consoles was shot just after 3 a.m. For some odd reason I would expect your chances of getting popped for a Playstation to be slimmer in the big city. It's just not as easy to get away, and cops are everywhere. So for that reason alone, maybe Manhattan's lack of armed rednecks is a good reason to try waiting in line there. The city never sleeps, so camping out also might not be such a bore. On the other hand, with all the unique offerings in New York, large electronics chains that are in every town along Jericho Turnpike seem like a waste of time. Though, if you're looking to pick up some of the hard-to-get items like Playstation 3 or TMX Elmo the expansive collection of Long Island malls and strip malls will probably be your best bet.

There are literally thousands of great stores in Manhattan, but if you're shopping for your kids or simply want to soak up a spectacle of holiday spirit and joy, FAO Schwartz is the place. If you've never been, the icon of a toy store was featured in the Tom Hanks classic, Big, when Hanks and his future boss famously share a moment playing "Chop Sticks" on the dance-on, light-up, floor piano. The piano has been in the store since I was a kid and it's still fun (and quite improved) to this day. Performers tap out all sorts of tunes on the keys throughout the day. German immigrant Frederick August Otto Schwartz began his business importing toys from Europe to his shop in Baltimore in 1862. By 1870, he opened his first shop in Manhattan. It has since grown, changed locations a number of times, and now has a second location in Las Vegas. FAO Schwartz is a stop on many tourists itineraries especially during the holidays. Other highlights within the almost 50,000 square feet of toys are the vast menagerie of life-sized stuffed animals, the sized-down luxury cars for kids, the first floor ice cream parlor, motion simulator ride, and some really cool Lego displays. First and foremost, the store is a place to shop, but it feels much like an amusement park when you're there. For kids it's a magical place that they won't soon forget.

Before heading into town for Black Friday or any of the shopping days left before Christmas, it might be wise to consider what and for whom you will be buying. Starting here, figure out which neighborhoods have what you're looking for. If it's fine art, go to Chelsea and Soho, for designer clothes try 5th Avenue or Soho, and for items created by the city's various ethnic cultures, seek out the corresponding areas. Good planning will save you time, and don't worry, no matter how well you plan there will always be those gem-like surprise shops that appear in your path. It's part of the beauty of shopping in Manhattan.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

The Inland Dunes

The East Hampton Trails Preservation Society (EHTPS) has been leading a series of hikes along the 45 miles of the Paumanok Path (PP) that run through East Hampton. On the second hike in the four-part series, we walked through the beech forest of Stony Hill and the inland dunes of Napeague. Experiencing these two unique environments side by side was extraordinary. We met Cliff, our hike leader, at the end point of the ten and one half-mile hike, left most of our cars there, and carpoled the group to the beginning of the hike. 24 people participated in the hike – the youngest hiker was nine years old and the eldest was 78. The pace was brisk, and we had two "sweeps," Bill and Richard, who hung back with the slower hikers and coordinated with Cliff to keep us all together. This was an exceptional hike as the entire segment of the PP we were hiking is well blazed and cleared. To take this hike on your own, meet a friend at Napeague Meadow Road about .7 miles north of the intersection with Route 27. Walk up the LIPA sub-station driveway to where the trail crosses it, so you will recognize the end of the hike when you get here. I suggest you bring a road atlas with you and carpool west through the winding back roads to the intersection of Soak Hides Road and Springy Banks Road in Springs.

A couple of days later, I returned to take a closer look at the three-mile section of trail that runs through the Napeague inland dunes. I followed Cranberry Hole Road over the railroad bridge. Traveling east on Montauk Highway, Cranberry Hole Road is east of Amagansett Town on the left side of the road. Just east of the triangular intersection by Cross Highway to Devon, the trail enters the woods on the right side of the road. Park on the shoulder (just east of the entrance to the trail). The proximity of a large house nearby, and the wide, level trail tread makes it seem like you are walking up an unpaved driveway. In fact, what you are walking on is a woods road parallel to the now submerged Old Montauk Highway. Wetlands border the trail and sphagnum moss and cranberry bushes sometimes cover it, but even though I took my walk in the rainy season, the new trail had only a few muddy areas.

Here, the trail heads almost directly east, with Cranberry Hole Road to the north and the train tracks and Montauk Highway to the south. After a short distance, the only reminders of civilization that remain are the sounds from the highway or an occasional train.

For long stretches, inkberry bushes border the trail like a hedge. It was warm for November, and I could hear peepers and the unmistakable plopping sound that disturbed frogs make when they hit the water. There was sweet pepperbush, highbush blueberry and rich scents of bog, pine, and marsh. A small animal skittered across the trail, and above, I heard the call of a raptor. Suddenly, the trail broke out into a dry sandy area covered in heather, bearberry, reindeer lichen and pitch pine, much like the dunes, only half a mile inland. The pitch pines here are reminiscent of the dwarf pines in the Sarnoff Preserve up island. They are shorter than normal, with the lower branches reaching out along the ground, and the scales of their pinecones rarely open at maturity.

The trail continues east to an abandoned railroad spur. Turn right and walk along the rail for about 100 yards. The turn away from the tracks is easy to miss – look for a hard left leading into a narrow trail. If you don't see white blazes, you have missed the turn. This is a newly cut section of trail, with brand-new, bright trail markers. As the trail moves north onto a shallow ridge, there will be more holly and what appears to be clusters of healthy white birch in the near distance. I wanted to examine the birch trees, but the catbrier was too thick there. Always be alert for the blazes, because there is a large network of trails here, offering many turns. Deer tracks on the trail are dense, and their traffic has damaged the trail tread in places. The ecology of these nutrient-poor inland dunes is fragile and easily disturbed. We must use these trails gently if we hope for this unique ecosystem to be here for future generations.

You will find that the trail slowly loses the little bit of elevation it had, and begins to thread its way through wetlands. There are still some enclaves of cattails that haven't been replaced by phragmites along this trail. Just before I reached a boardwalk, I saw the entrance to a trail marked by light blue painted rectangles veering south of the PP. The trail now widens, with leaves and roots churned into the sand. It takes a lot of energy to move forward on this soft, mushy trail tread and the blazes were very far apart.

It wasn't long before I came upon the other end of the blue trail, where it once again intersects the PP. I gambled that this was indeed the other end of the blue trail I had passed earlier and not another trail leading to who knows where. I turned right on this unknown trail and was rewarded with a lovely trail experience. This trail is very well engineered – a great amount of care and expertise went into the building and blazing. It led me back to the PP heading west to the roadside parking at Cranberry Hole.

On 12/10, I will be on the third hike in the Paumanok Path series. Rick Whalen (631-267-6608) is leading it. Meet at Kirk's Park and carpool to the start at Napeague Meadow Road. Hope to see you there!

JUST FOR KIDS

Car Trip? Kid Catastrophe No More

Heading to grandma's for the holidays? Planning on a five-hour jaunt to see Aunt Margaret in Virginia? The first hour is probably going to be a piece of cake as your children are just plain excited to be on the road. The second hour (after the first potty stop) will be filled with videos on their portable DVD players. By the third hour, the fighting in the backseat starts, and desperate times call for desperate measures. Be stocked with some great travel-sized games and it's guaranteed to be easy riding from there on in. Grandma or Aunt Margaret will be greeted with smiles, instead of a cranky, overstressed family.

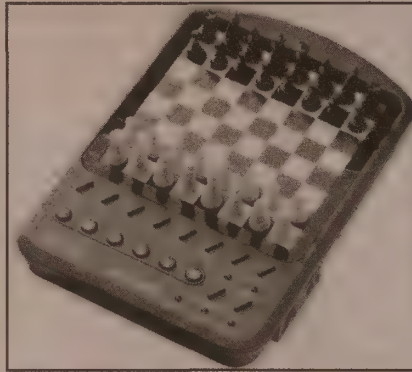

You no longer have to fear zillions of pieces flying in every direction, or little cards and game pieces rolling around in the backseat. Travel games are well made, durable and pretty versatile. Many feature more than one game in a compact container, perfect for satisfying every type of child and every unique personality. One of the best travel games around is the "All in One" travel pack featured at www.areyougame.com. This set contains magnetic pieces (they won't slip off during those bumpy rides) and allows your child to play Chess, Backgammon, Checkers, Chinese Checkers, Bingo, Shoots & Ladders, Ludo, Solitaire, Steeple Chase, and Tic Tac Toe. The best part is that the pieces are stored in hidden compartments.

Travel Bingo is another fun one to play in the car. Mom or Dad can have fun calling the numbers and prizes can be rewarded for the winning cards. Be creative with the calls to keep everyone's attention such as "I-9...for the highway that we just passed," or "G-2...gee, it's almost 2 and we need to stop for lunch." You'll be sure to keep even the littlest child entertained during the trip. "I Spy" also sells a great travel sized game to keep your children challenged and having fun. This memory matching game is very popular with parents and children alike. After playing a few rounds, put the game away and use the scenery that you are passing to create your own I Spy game. For example, "I spy three horses on the left," and "I spy a tall building on the right," are fun creations.

Other wonderful travel-sized games include Monopoly, Battleship, Electronic Battleship, Scrabble, Checkers and Chess, essentially, if you can think of a popular board game that's out there, there's generally a travel-sized version available. Most offer pieces that are magnetized, or scaled down for easy storage in a mini, compact box. It is great for playing in the car, or taking right into a hotel room quickly.

Looking for something different? Sudoku is the challenging, exciting and sometimes frustrating numbers game that has gained popularity in the recent months becoming a "must have" and "must know how to do" game. Everyone is always playing it and talking about it...even young children. Do you Sudoku? For kids, there is a great travel-sized book that can offer hours of fun to your 8 years-old and up child. Sisters and brothers have been known to put aside their rivalry and pair up to make sense of these fun number puzzles.

zles. Don't leave your little one's out either. Dora the Explorer has her very own Sudoku book for the younger set that lets them play with stickers!

If your child is just not the board game kind of child, and their travel-sized and handheld video games aren't cutting it either, don't give up hope. It's crafts to the rescue. The "Travel Arts and Game Tote" featured on www.amazon.com is a great product. It's been tried and tested by my very own child and kept him entertained and busy for a 2-hour ride. The best part is that it comes with a car valet that attaches to the headrest of the car giving it a tray-like appearance. The set is pretty basic featuring a 9 x 12 inch pad, crayons and colored pencils. I vamped mine up with stickers, glitter glue and foam stickies. The concept of it attaching to the headrest and offering an entertainment forum that is fairly neat is what really sold me on the idea. The best part was that by the time we arrived at our destination, my son had plenty of artwork to give to appreciative relatives.

Traveling together as a family can be a fun event if you are prepared. Don't leave home without a few games and activities planned to keep the little ones occupied and out of trouble. And remember, as a last resort, there's always the license plate game...happy traveling!

THE Y FACTOR with Christian McLean

Talking Turkey: About Tryptophan

So, you know that excuse you've been using about how the Tryptophan in your Thanksgiving turkey made you fall asleep while listening to your Aunt Agnes explain all about her bunions, well guess what, it's probably not the turkey at all.

Yes, turkey contains tryptophan (actually L-tryptophan), and yes, this amino acid is linked to relaxation and sleepiness, but it probably isn't the reason you're falling asleep. Aunt Agnes is that boring, but there's more to it.

First, I'll explain what L-tryptophan is and what it does in your body. This amino acid is internalized by the body and used to produce niacin. Niacin is a B-vitamin which produces serotonin. It is the serotonin that produces the sleepy effect. But this is under only ideal circumstances. In order to work like this, you must ingest the L-tryptophan on an empty stomach. Only then, will the body get the full effect of the chain reaction.

Let's face it, no one eats just turkey on Thanksgiving. The truth is, if you add the sweet potatoes, gravy and pie, not to mention the various other delights that one ingests in that sitting, we begin to see why we actually feel like crashing on the couch for the rest of the afternoon.

In order to begin to digest that which you have just gorged, your body has to increase blood flow in the stomach. By bringing more blood to the stomach, blood flow to other parts of the body is lost, which can make you feel drowsy. Since the meal is so high in fat, the situation is compounded, as high-fat meals take more time to digest than other, lighter fares.

But, we're not done yet. A little holiday cheer doesn't make things any better, either. Had a few beers with Cousin Steve while watching the ball game? A glass of vino to drown out the shrilling of your mother? Alcohol is a depressant and, therefore, will only help you sink deeper into that couch. But fat and booze, as delightful a combination as that sounds, are not the only two factors in this narcoleptic cocktail.

While there is much information that shows L-tryptophan gets caught up in the mix of amino acids that are ingested along with the turkey, a reason why L-tryptophan can have a slight effect is because of mashed potatoes, known to your body as carbohydrates. Carbohydrates trigger the release of insulin in the body. This secretion takes many of the amino acids that are in the bloodstream, which would otherwise balance out the L-tryptophan, and sends them to muscle cells. This drop in other amino acids leaves L-tryptophan to have its way in the bloodstream, catalyzing the production of serotonin.

But even this doesn't mean that you are going to pass out in the La-Z-Boy for the rest of the night just by eating turkey and mashed potatoes. There are many other foods that contain more tryptophan than turkey. Beef tenderloin and soy beans contain about 115% of your daily allowance, where turkey only has about 109%, putting it on par with lamb and halibut. Chicken has 121% of our daily intake, but you don't see anyone passing out after eating a grilled chicken sandwich.

The post-Thanksgiving pass-out is a combination of several things, many of which I have already explained, but one big one has nothing to do with what you put in your body. Stress, and the relief of stress, can put you over the top. You've spent the whole day running around in the kitchen, trying to make sure everything is perfect for dinner, or you had to deal with your father-in-law's condescending remarks about how you still haven't taken last year's Christmas lights off the house, or that you've let his daughter down – all this takes its toll. Once dinner is served, digested and removed from the table, much of the pressure is off and you can relax. Also, once the relatives leave, taking their bags of issues with them, you can be yourself again. You can put down the deflector shields, put up your feet and fall asleep.

And if your Thanksgiving afternoon nap has you feeling like you aren't going to fall back asleep later in the night, eat JUST some turkey on an empty stomach and guess what? The situation is perfect to allow that L-tryptophan effect to kick in, sending the serotonin into action and hopefully allowing you to rest through the night – just in time to check the Christmas lights the next day. You know, the one's your father-in-law was talking about.

Depression the Temptress

Gray clouds blanket a sky that somewhere, presumably, is blue. Trees tremble and drop their leaves while the blustery winds roll in off the nippy whitecaps. As November finally shows us its true colors, a long, lonely winter looms.

In a place as isolated as Montauk is in winter, it's easy to slip blindly into an icy pool of solitude. And this solitude is often accompanied by a seductive, faceless lady named depression. She is a tricky one, indulging you in her inactivity and keeping you close with her convenience. In those quiet months, it is tempting to crawl into her roomy arms and spend days and weeks alone with her. She asks nothing of you; only that you stay. She gives herself so fully that she swallows you up, and you soon forget that there was a world before her. She is wicked, and she feeds on your happiness and well-being. It is imperative that you start to arm yourself against her seduction now, because she comes on strong, and she is beautiful, all draped in gray, dipping her toes in the winter waves. You must approach her from a certain angle, so that you may enjoy the quiet beaches and the rough waters instead of accepting them as the motifs of your sad story.

It is beautiful out here in winter, and standing solitary on a snowy beach can be as joyful as it is saddening, if you remind yourself that true happiness comes from within. The key to enjoying that happiness? Okay, so there's no one else on the beach. You can still dance in and out of waves! In fact, you can dance even harder, and sing your heart out too, now that there's no one around to judge you. Basking in the very moment that seemed daunting or lonely can give you the truest liberation. So, when you are walking one winter day, and you look down the long stretch of beach to see nothing but a lone figure in the distance, try turning up the corners of your lips instead of dabbing your eyes. Try thinking to yourself, "how beautiful and strong that figure is" rather than "how beautiful and weak." A slight adjustment in the way you see the world can help keep Ms. Depression at bay.

It helps to resist the impulse of feeling abandoned as the population dwindles, and to feel more akin to the select few who get to stay. There is always available parking, restaurant week, and your private beaches, assets that summer people would kill for (frighteningly, that really might be true). Your calm, tranquil evenings and your crackling fire make winter a time of recharging the batteries, a time of rejuvenation.

I've always found it can be enticing to bask in the downsides, but I've learned that the rewards of sadness are not nearly as romantic as they seemed when Winona Ryder spoke about how "Reality Bit" or when Picasso painted his blue violins. The rewards of depression are not full-length feature films or immortality in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. So instead of basking in the romanticism of the sadness, I urge you to take the happy road this year. When you approach the temptress at the water's edge, how do you choose to see her?

This year, December can be dotted with red wine evenings at Babette's. January can find you sipping saketinis at Bamboo. And February, threatening February, can have joyful karaoke nights at Almondito. As Thanksgiving comes and goes, closing the door on the gateway season and ushering winter into our homes with the smell of pine needles and crackling fires, we have a choice. Shall we be tempted by depression in her sexy black cloak? Or shall we prance over snowdrifts and take to solitary beaches, resisting the urge to be lonely and embracing the stark naked beauty of this place when it really belongs to us? I choose joy this year. I choose to laugh my way towards springtime.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

The Odiferous Linden

Our world would certainly be less stimulating without the fragrance of plants. Almost nothing compares with the experience of walking through a garden and being hit by the sweet scents of flowers and trees. What a loss it would be if the Magnolia, with its lemon-vanilla fragrance that carries people to a virtual nirvana, did not exist. Another tree of this sort, though lesser known, is the Linden. A single tree, growing upwind, produces the most magnificent perfumes in late June and early July. Every garden should have at least one!

Linden trees, sometimes referred to as Basswood or Lime trees, are part of a genus of plants named Tilia. There are a number of different species, originating from either America or Europe. All are deciduous and produce dark-green leaves of various sizes and clusters of inconspicuous, very fragrant flowers. These trees have been around for a very long time. There are references to Linden trees in Greek and Roman writings – the tree spirits of Greek mythology were believed to be wedded in Linden trees, and the Romans identified the tree with conjugal love and fidelity because of its clean, fresh fragrance.

There are distinct differences in each species within the genus, though all species are winter hardy to about Zone Four. Tilia Americana is a large shade tree with a rounded crown – Tilia Cordata is the European Linden, producing smaller, densely arranged leaves – Tilia Japonica originates from Japan, and produces leaves with a silvery underside – Tilia Tomentosa is a very large, Eastern European and Asian variety with a whitish, powdery coating on the underside of its leaves. All varieties are widely cultivated as ornamental trees because of their naturally manicured shapes and fragrant flowers.

Among those available in the States, several varieties are recommended. The choice of which to use depends on the tree's size. Greenspire (Tilia Cordata) is one of the most popular, because of its vigorous growth – it can attain heights of up to 50 feet and grow to 35 feet wide. It is also popular due to its uniform branching, dark green leaves, and exceptional tolerance for difficult conditions. Greenspire develops a narrow, oval crown with a straight trunk. Green Globe is a dwarf tree that has a "lollipop on a stick" appearance, with a tight crown and compact foliage, that grows to 15 feet tall. Redmond is a vigorous tree with a pyramidal growth habit and branches that turn red at the onset of cold weather in autumn that will grow 50 feet tall. Chancole works well as a street tree, because of its upright habit, and also grows to 50 feet. Corzam provides a uniform pyramidal shape in a compact tree that reaches 45 feet tall. Corzam's glossy, dark green leaves create a pyramid of green all summer.

In late June and early July, a Linden tree has a powerful, haunting fragrance that can be detected for up to a mile away. Its fragrant flowers hang from the middle of leafy, ribbon-like green bracts in long-stalked clusters. The flowers are tiny, with five yellowish-white petals, and possess nectar that attracts bees – which means that bees will be attracted to your yard from far away (the only downside of the Linden). During the two or three weeks during which these trees bloom, bees will forsake most other flowers to forage on the Linden. The flowers, when gathered and dried, can be used to make tea, and are a frequent ingredient in retail perfumes.

Linden wood is soft and creamy, and it is much favored by woodcarvers because of its workability (it is said to "cut like cheese"). In past centuries, it was used to make ships' figureheads and cigar-store Indians. Today, it is used for broom handles, beehive frames, piano sounding boards, and parts of guitars.

The Linden's inner bark is fibrous and can be twisted and woven into cords, ropes and matting. Native Americans of the Northeastern tribes used it to make bags to carry food. Rope was made from it by "retting" (keeping the bark under water for about a month, until the soft tissues rotted away, leaving the fibrous tissue). Thread made of Basswood bark was used to stitch together mats made of cattail leaves and to bind up warriors' wounds. The Iroquois carved masks from the sapwood on the living tree, then split it off from the trunk and hollowed it out from behind.

The Linden prefers the moist soils of valleys and uplands, where it typically grows, in hardwood forests. However, the tree is quite versatile and tolerant of both rich and poor soils and grows well in full sun, to partly sunny locations, in the landscape.

Fine Time To Recline

Following a long day of work, or even after a short day of leisure, there is little to nothing that can compare to a solid sitting-session in a recliner chair. Seat-time may frequent all facets of your day, but rarely is it the kind where your arms, ankles, shoulders, feet, elbows, knees, neck, and head are all at complete rest. There is something in the manner in which gravity gathers you further into the comfortable cushion beneath your bosom as your legs perpendicularly hover outstretched above the floor. It is a sensation that mirrors that of a yoga position, only no effort is required – some kind of laziness in limbo. Whatever you call it, it is worth taking the time to evaluate the status of your reclining chair, or lack thereof, to achieve this moment of maximized relaxation.

Traditionally, color is not much of an important factor in choosing a chair. How many times have you seen the "TV chair" sticking out like a sore thumb in the room of real furniture? The interior design craze, however, has changed tradition and provided color-coordinated options with which you can easily blend that chair in with the rest of the room. Your choice of fabric should be based first on resiliency to various heights, weights, shapes and sizes during weeks and months of wear but hopefully not tear. A layer of leather will last you a lifetime of lazy days if treated gently (just remember to make sure the sloppy eaters stick with the other furniture). As classic as leather may be, its high maintenance and the occasional slipperiness that makes it hard to remain perfectly still is reason enough to explore mesh or other micro-fiber fabrics.

These marvels of mechanics have been around for over 75 years and, thanks to modern technology and a solid dedication to leisure, recliner chairs now feature quite a few perks that add a whole new experience to your sitting-session. Massage rollers and heating pads, for instance, are now placed beneath the cushions to make the chair work harder for you. Suspended in your chair, with all limbs at rest, the soothing warmth and vibration adds a nearly spiritual element as you drift into further relaxation. Other recently evolved aspects are storage compartments and even a compatible mini-cooler (usually within one or both of the armrests) that, in addition to keeping your libations cool at the right temperature, provide you with even more reason to avoid getting up for awhile. Just make sure there is a built-in battery as a back-up for if and when the AC adapter gets knocked out of the socket.

There are no brand new models of recliner chairs on the market as of now, and La-Z-Boy remains the most available and popular at Macy's and JC Penny. Your average recliner is available at most furniture stores, but to find one that has one of those extra perks like a cooler require a search online. Your best bet is www.recliner-chairs.org. If you have children at the age of five or younger, consider the safety of the chair you buy or currently have.

Believe it or not, the Consumer Product Safety Commission has been releasing warning statements since the early 1980s about the dangers of recliner chairs. Children remain susceptible to head or limb injury if unsupervised while climbing around the chair as the opening between the chair seat and the leg rest can quickly clamp down on them.

In addition to a lovely wealth of laziness, recliner chairs may also provide several health benefits – particularly to those suffering from medical conditions such as arthritis, asthma, circulation problems and back pain. The additional seating positions one finds in such a chair help relieve straining and stagnation of at-risk parts of the body as well as reduce the risk of pressure sores and other conditions.

For the best benefits, obtain a dual-motor chair because models with one motor are not as adjustable. The backrests and footrests can be independently adjusted on dual-motor models, while they are adjusted simultaneously on single motor models. This can lead to difficulty when standing up from or sitting down in the chair as the backrest is not in sync with the footrest.

This could remain a problem for those with mobility or joint problems.

Be it reasons of health or relaxation, a dependable (and safe) recliner chair is an essential addition to your home. With the holidays approaching, there will be several reasons, as well as plenty of time to lounge and remain at rest. Think of the big meals that will need a digesting, the brand new DVDs that will need a watching, and the long days that will need an escaping – and you will think of the right choice for an ideal sitting-session.

– Kirk Cassels

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

As the market levels, or even becomes a buyers' market, in other parts of Long Island, New York, and the rest of the country, prices in the Hamptons are holding, where the real estate world is in a world all its own! I guess one could even call it an out of this world market, where numbers asked for and taken in continue to astound us. Buying and selling real estate here on the East End has become big business with high-stakes players. The prices that the area demands bring with them large corporations and mega-developers, many of whom have begun to, or plan to, build elaborate housing and resort sites.

In Bridgehampton, a developer has purchased the property on the corner of the Sag Harbor/Bridgehampton Turnpike and has already submitted plans to construct a resort complex that will include an inn, four guest cottages, a convention center and a health and beauty spa. The proposed project on the site of the old Bulls Head Inn, The Orchard, will be subject to approval, of course. Two multi-million-dollar Montauk resorts are under renovation to become high-end vacation retreats. The Panoramic, is directly on the ocean and is said to have gone for an unfathomable price, according to a local Montauk realtor. The price has not yet been disclosed. At Gurney's Inn right next door, timeshares remain popular and are at an all-time high. The recent real estate boom of the past few years has drawn big money to the Hamptons from all corners of the country. Many of these larger commercial deals are made privately, long before they ever hit the market. Regulations here prevent new developers from simply building whatever it is they want to build, and restrictions along our shorelines are tight. Not much gets by the preservation groups on the East End, who work tirelessly to protect its natural beauty and integrity.

In many cases, new developers and realtors work in cooperation with preservation groups, making these transitions smoother than they may have gone otherwise. The Corcoran Group, for example, partnered with the Peconic Land Trust last year in order to help educate buyers in regards to the sensitivity of some of the East End's most valuable assets and commodities - its land, waterfronts and wetlands.

While some worry about over-development on the East End, it is important to point out that many of these projects have brought improvement and beautification to the area. Some very large sales in the past few years have actually saved historical relics from being becoming rubble, or have improved the beauty, or brought more commerce to the area. The Bullova watchcase factory in Sag Harbor, purchased by a large development company last year, had been considered an eyesore for many years and was to be demolished. It was literally falling apart. It was purchased by a company called Cape Advisors for $16 million as-is, and is now in the process of being renovated into residential housing. The new building plans include 72 luxury condominiums and 13 town houses.

On the North Fork, however, the market has shifted and there is quite a bit for sale, and prices have definitely gone down. Again, the high-end remains in a class by itself. That rings true for the North Fork as well, but smaller properties have definitely gotten "real," as many North Fork realtors put it. At this time last year, the market was firm on the North Fork and sellers there were getting close to, on, or above their asking prices, but now we are seeing more room for negotiation. This should not be confused with a drastic drop of any kind, however, and it goes without saying that the high-end properties on the North Fork have been elevated to a new plane.

THE NEW A&E SECTION

Dear Dan and Sabrina,

I would like to thank you for your article this week about my book Chasing America. I was pleased by the fact that you seem to sense what I am trying to do with my work. The article was an unexpected boost last weekend.

Thanks again.

Regards.
Dennis Watlington

IN THE EYE OF THE BEHOLDER

Dear Dan,

I did not yet go see what the Dan's Papers current cover is all about, rendered by your artist Sonia Grineve - (Hey! GRIN Eval). To me, it's some kind of natural outdoor scene - birds in flight over some kind of land that could be the East End, which it probably is.

But I saw something else: It seemed to me I was seeing penguins out of their natural habitat and what looked like two people, center right. It looked like an Indian holding the head of another Indian, or maybe a dark-haired white man; or maybe it was a white man (of the Old West?) with long hair holding the head of an Indian. Yet, Indians were the ones who beheaded people more, like the tribe my mother's ancestry comes from - Seneca, Illinois.

By the way, the one holding the head (my first concept) appears to have one leg, in a reclining position. Maybe he's the dead one, being held by the other, perhaps the rest of his body intact.

So, what do you make of this perception? I'm sure the artist did not intend to have people see that. But in art, people see different things!

BEST IN NY

Dear Dan,

My sister, who lives in Southampton, sent me your bagel article. It was very funny and it is all true! I grew up on Long Island and have lived in San Francisco and Marin County for twenty-two years. The bagels do suck and so do the Jewish delis. But, if you ever come to Marin - maybe on a drive to Pt. Reyes or the beach - stop in San Anselmo and try Barton's Bagels. These are the ones my husband (also from New York) says come closest to H&H (no where near as good, but the best ones we have found out here).

By the way, no ex New Yorkers who live here like Noah's.

Good Luck!

DEER ME

Dear David Lion Rattiner,

In your article "Hot to Trot," you indicate that the deer are quickly losing their habitats and we are losing the reason why most of us came here. When we moved to Montauk 20 something years ago, there were many more deer than there are now - I don't believe that bow and arrow hunting (an especially cruel sport) was allowed. I overheard a conversation in White's Drug and Department Store when bow and arrow hunting was introduced to Montauk - the "idiot" was laughing about how difficult it was for him to track a deer that he had shot with at least four arrows - "He ran and ran trailing blood and I still didn't get the S.O.B." Are these normal people? I don't think so - not when there are birth control darts that would solve the problem.

I've written many times to B. Castro and others about the hunting situation here - they seem to not see that reducing the speed limit on Montauk Highway would eliminate 95% of encounters.

I'm not like you but you must have had some kind of "epiphany" to do a 360-degree on the deer situation - as you imply in your last paragraph. Last year you loved seeing them. This year you want them killed. What gives??

We've lived in Montauk for over 20 years and have yet to see deer dancing out in the middle of the street - sometimes they walk slowly across - sometimes they just rush out. But in either case - speed of your vehicle is the issue.

And you mention the case (unfortunate) as it was of a deer run-in with a bike rider. Well they should "can" triathlons here - my neighbors and I were stuck for hours at the beach because hundreds of bicycles blocked the road and took over. It was a dangerous situation for anyone caught up in it - I had an elderly relative at home alone. We told her we'd be back in fifteen minutes and didn't arrive back for three hours - give me the deer any day - I was never stuck anywhere because of a deer - Montauk cannot absorb the number of people who choose to be involved in these races - cut the numbers to 1/4 of what is allowed to at least give some respect to the residents and the deer.

Police Blotter

Shotgun? No, That's Just A Deer

A resident on Shelter Island reported to police that while putting garbage out on the deck, a sound from the woods, resembling a shotgun, resonated. The police showed up and investigated the sound and found several deer in the woods, but no hunters. The police mentioned in the report that the deer may have made the sound by walking on debris. However, no one is suggesting the obvious - deer are now packing heat.

Leaf Blower Tussle

A resident in East Hampton was leaf-blowing her property when she got into an argument with her neighbor. The neighbor wanted her to stop blowing the leaves out into the street, and took a picture of her. After the picture was taken, she called police. No word on whether or not the picture was a keeper.

That's Weird

Police were called when a Sag Harbor man reported that somebody had entered his house, removed a Toshiba television and placed it in the front yard. Police have examined the television for fingerprints, and for any decent football games that might be playing.

* * *

Bicycle Recovery

An electric bicycle reported stolen by a 50-year-old man in Greenport was recovered last week by police. The bicycle was found in the possession of a 30-year-old man, who was charged with fifth-degree criminal possession of stolen property and petty larceny. The 50-year-old man now has his electric bicycle back, and can hit the pavement on the road of justice.

Chicken and Duck Attack

A resident in Riverhead reported to police that his pet chicken and duck were attacked by a dog. The dog's owner was issued a summons for not controlling the animal. Both the chicken and the duck were sent to the animal hospital in Mattituck on the North Fork and are doing okay. The chicken did not comment, but the duck did mention, "quack, quack," and insulted the dog that attacked him. His comments were too obscene to be published.

Soccer Goal Stolen

A soccer goal from the Hampton Bays Elementary School was reported stolen by the Hampton Bays Youth Soccer Organization. How? Why? Such weird stuff this week.

Arsenal

A man in Southampton was arrested by police after he was identified as the person who had entered a Southampton home and removed several rifles, shotguns and swords from the home. Luckily, for the police, he went quietly.

Stranded Kayaker

Police in Shelter Island responded to a kayaker who was stranded in the middle of the harbor in cold-weather conditions. The kayaker ended up being okay and was helped ashore by police. After he warmed up, police advised him not to "go up the creek without a paddle" anymore.
